W. R. MOODY IS SPEAKER AT KIWANIS

Guest of Dr. Jack Anderson Who Was His Pupil at Northfield

TALKS OF SCHOOL

Fine Musical Program Given by Prof. Herwig; President Clark Reports

By W. L. TAYLOR

W. R. Moody, son of the great evangelist, Dwight L. Moody, and president of the Northfield Schools, at Northfield, Mass., was the speaker at the noon luncheon of the Kiwanis Club at the Broadway Inn yesterday. He was invited here by Dr. Jack Anderson, who at one time was a student in this school, and whom to this day is a great booster for the school.

Mr. Moody gave the club members and guests an insight into the great work being done by his school. He said in part:

"I was in Los Angeles twenty-five years ago when the trusty old horse and mule pulled the street cars for the small population of that small city, and I want to say it is almost a miracle what changes have taken place in that length of time, not only in Los Angeles, but the surrounding country as well.

"My father started the Northfield Schools forty years ago, and I consider the school the most exclusive in the world. We won't take any girl or boy who has money, and we won't enroll them unless they are willing to work. We charge only $100 a year for board and tuition, and we give the students an opportunity to work out half of this amount. There are 36 nationalities represented in our school now. We hire no help at our school—the boys and girls do the work—even the cooking. Our students go out into the world self made men and women, fired with the spirit and ambition which means success and happiness. We devote two hours a week to the study of the Bible. My father once said: 'No man is illiterate who knows the Bible.' Today there are more than 1600 students who were once enrolled in our school, and who are helping financially to support the school."

Prof. Moody told of several instances where men and women had left his school and had later made their mark in the world. There are men and women scattered all over this country, many of whom are holding responsible positions, who laid foundation for their success in the Moody School back in Massachusetts.

"There was a 'savage' from Liberia who came to our school many years ago. He studied and finally finished the work and passed out into the world the same as other students, making good grades in his work while with us," said Prof. Moody. "A few years later he was in Harvard, and after a while graduated. He took post-graduate work in other schools and mastered Latin, French and Greek, and was regarded by his tutors as a man of exceptionally fine mind. One day he came to me and said he wanted to go back home. He wanted once more to feel the gentle caress of his old black mammy who lived in a grass house with a dirt floor, and he wanted to be the means of educating and uplifting his people. He had translated the New Testament into a lingo that his people could understand. And so he went away bent on spreading the gospel of a better life. And who can tell what will be the result of his work?" concluded the speaker.

Only eternity can measure the result of the work that will be accomplished by this one man who was blessed with an intellect that compared favorably with the brightest men of our day.

The Kiwanis Club showed its appreciation of Prof Moody by giving him a rising vote of thanks for his presence and splendid address.

Prof. Herwig, a noted vocalist, and a recent arrival from Philadelphia, by request sang three beautiful numbers.

Dr. Jack Anderson gave the attendance prize, which was a book on the life of Dwight L. Moody, and was won by James McBryde. Dr. Anderson urged that when books were given as prizes that the same be donated to the public library after the receiver had read them.

There was an unusually large number of guests present, among them being Revs. Edmonds, Cole, Funk and Rasmus, the new pastor of the M. E. Church, besides Prof. Herwig, the noted vocalist.

A message was read from President Lyman P. Clark, who is attending the convention at San Francisco, to the effect that himself, Bill Bode and Sid Brown, were thoroughly enjoying themselves, and that the convetion would be a big affair. Kiwanians and visitors present were: R. L. Galvin, Dr. W. T. Hurt, James McBryde, H. L. Finley, P. J. Hayselden, C. M. Calderwood, J. H. Wittmeyer, Ray Bentley, Frank Bentley, Dr. Ritchey, A. L. HIGH TIES CITRUS IN ZERO SCORE

Neither Team Crosses Goal Line in Strenuous Battle on Grid

HI Y GIVES BANQUET

Teams Have Good Time After the Struggle for Pigskin Victory

The heavy weight teams of Glendale high and Citrus union high, Friday, not only furnished the spectacle of a very hotly contested clean game in which neither team was able to score a goal, on the Citrus campus, but also enjoyed a banquet following the game given by the Hi Y of Citrus union for the two teams and their coaches, supplemented by an evening's entertainment.

Horatio Butts, captain of the visiting team, Ryan and Stofft were the Glendale stars of the game. Three times Butts tried a drop kick, missing by inches.

The special guests of the evening were the 42 men in the Glendale squad, Coaches Hayhurst and Butterfield, and Rex Kelley, secretary of the Glendale district Y. M. C. A.

The banquet was served in the school dining hall and prepared by members of the girls' league, who had furnished place cards and decorations, and who served it at two long tables.

Captain Robinson of the Citrus team was toastmaster and called upon Coach Sturges to tell why the banquet was given. He explained that he had gotten acquainted with Coach Butterfield and many of the Glendale boys during the encampment at Catalina and discovered that they had neither sprouting wings nor horns and tails, that they were just regular boys whom it would be good for the Citrus bunch to know.

Coach Hayhurst responded, voicing his satisfaction in the clean playing that had been done, and Coach Butterfield spoke along the same line. Fred Stofft responded on behalf of the Glendale team and Mr. Hayden, principal of Citrus union high, talked on the value of good sportsmanship all through life. Secretary Kelley also spoke in the same vein.

Following the banquet an adjournment was taken to the school auditorium where a playlet was put on by the dramatic department of the school with music furnished by the school orchestra.

CLEVER SKATERS AT FALL EXPOSITION ON HARVARD

One of the cleverest pair of roller skate artists in the west are staging an exhibition these nights at the Fall exposition for the benefit of the Merchants' Baseball Team. Exhibitions are given every evening.

Big crowds of sightseers visit the grounds nightly, but so far the receipts have been very low, the crowd coming to see but not to spend.

Naturally this is not particularly beneficial to the concessionaires or to the fund which it has been hoped for would be secured.

WATER AND POWER ACT DEBATED AT HIGH SCHOOL

Business Men's Bible Class of First M. E. Church Stages Event

Of the thirty measures to be voted upon next Tuesday, most citizens probably believe that No. 2 (the Wright enforcement act), and No. 19, (the Water and Power act) are the most vital. To throw further light upon the latter measure, the Business Men's Bible class of the First M. E. church of which Mr. Cyrus Cunningham is president and Mr. Roy B. Coeur is vice president, staged a most interesting debate last night at the high school auditorium.

Ray Morrow, assistant city attorney of Glendale, presided, while Judge John A. Burgan of Los Angeles and State Senator Lyman King of Redlands, ably presented the two sides of the water and power act to a moderate-sized audience. Each speaker was allowed thirty minutes after which a half hour was given to asking and answering questions.

Questions were asked by Samuel A. Davis, Roy B. Coeur, W. D. Root and Henry Gross. It was conceded by Senator King that the state could borrow money at a lower rate than the private power corporations and also that in some cases cities that have taken over power from corporations have reduced the price. The majority of the audience appeared to favor the act.

Both speakers were given a rising vote of thanks for coming to Glendale to discuss this momentous measure.

BIG REPUBLICAN RALLY

WOOLWINE RESORT TO ARREST FOR A CROWD

His Followers Hit Up Speed and Are Stopped Selling Crowd

Officer Williams of Eagle Rock didn't stop to inquire about Thos. Lee Woolwine's light wines and beer program, when he made the arrest of Frank Warner, Woolwine proponent who was parading the streets driving a band of old soldiers who played to attract a crowd for the non-partisan candidate to address.

How it happened, according to an explanation tendered later by one of Woolwine's men, was that there had been an effort to gather a crowd from 11 o'clock until 12, without any result, and finally as a last resort, the idea of a strategic arrest was evolved. Frank Warner sped up Colorado boulevard at 31 miles an hour, and Officer Williams, unconsciously inveigled into the scheme, came out and dutifully made the arrest.

True to form, there was some argument, but the offender was booked to appear at the city hall at trial next week. When the matter of the arrest was brought to Woolwine, who was conversing with some of the business men who had gathered around to see what the trouble was, he commended the officer for doing his duty and said the driver owed him an apology. There was general shaking of hands, and the statement was made that the arrest would be settled satisfactorily.

Woolwine did not make a speech, but talked to a number of residents individually. The party made their departure at one o'clock for Pasadena.

CHARGE DISMISSED AGAINST BURBANK PHYSICIAN

Nicola Quinto Charges Dr. Burleigh With Bandaging Wrong Eye

"Because he bandage up my wrong eye, because he pinch me wid a pin, I have him arrest," said Nicola Quinto, who appeared against Quinto, who appeared with assault in Judge Crawford's court yesterday morning. The case was dismissed.

Quinto went to the office of Dr. Burleigh on or about the 24th of last month and wanted treatment for one of his eyes which had become inflamed from dust which had lodged in it.

Dr. Burleigh treated both eyes, because they were both inflamed. Quinto did not object to the treatments of the doctor until he began to wrap a bandage around Quinto's head. The bandage, according to the doctor, accidentally fell down over the right eye, and Quinto thought he was being assaulted.

It is believed the thieves had been watching the Maillous dwelling, and that they entered the home when it was known that no one was home. The theft was not discovered until the family returned. Detectives Royle and La Rock are working on this case.

BOND ELECTION FOR WATER IS DISCUSSED

What the $60,000 Will Mean to Eagle Rock Is Considered a Problem

The question of how much the voting of the $60,000 bond issue for increasing the water supply of Eagle Rock will mean to the city has frequently been raised, since the bond election was called for December 12.

F. C. Echert, of the Eagle Rock water department, threw some light on the subject, when he explained the extent to which the bond issue could be expected to cope with the situation. He explained that, in his estimation, there was no possibility of striking water by drilling into the rockbed upon which the present wells are resting.

The greatest depth, according to Mr. Echert, ever reached in drilling for water was 600 feet, and at that depth, there was less water than at 100 feet. On the west side, the drilling for oil has been in the process for three years, and at a depth of over 3000 feet, the same formation of soil, which can be drilled only at the rate of a foot a day, is still found.

In view of these facts, the limit to the water supply to be had in Eagle Rock from her own wells, depends on the water found on the rock layer. Mr. Echert estimated that with the drilling of the two wells, Eagle Rock would have sufficient water supply for three years, that length of time being placed as a maximum.

At the end of that time, it would be necessary to develop some other source of supply, in order to furnish the necessary means of fire protection and water for domestic supply. If the districts to the east, which are now being supplied with Eagle Rock water, are annexed to Los Angeles, Eagle Rock would be relieved of a certain amount of drain, but not of a sufficient quantity to make a material difference in the ultimate outcome.

As to the carrying of the bond issue, Mr. Echert said that the revenues from the water department would take care of it, and that it would not mean an increase in the taxation. This bond issue, aside from calling for the drilling of two wells, also provides for a steel tank of 300,000 gallons capacity to be placed on Sagamore hill, with mains laid to increase the volume of the distributing system. Whether there is water enough on the present strata to justify the expenditure, is another matter that voters will be interested in investigating, before approving the bond issue.

The danger of contamination of the drinking water is now a thing of the past, as a chlorinating gas plant has been purchased and is now ready for use, at the slightest show of impurity in the water. Reports on the water are received every week from Raymond G. Osborne, and the chlorinating gas plant can be installed within three hours, should the necessity arise.

HIGH GIRLS STUNT NIGHT HELD IN GYMNASIUMS

Eight Hundred Attend Annual Event of Young Women

At 7:15 Friday evening the two gyms at Glendale high opened for the annual girls' stunt party, the freshmen and sophomores taking the girls' gym where Doris Moyse and Irene Miller were in charge, the juniors and seniors occupying the other with Orrell Hester and Ruth Hunt as managers.

Helen Sherwood, president of the girls' league, and Mrs. George U. Moyse, vice principal, had general conduct of the affair and many mothers were present as interested spectators, the girls in attendance numbering about 800.

Two stunts put on by women members of the faculty opened the program. The first represented a colored belle with so many suitors she didn't know what to do with them. As they appeared and were about to be followed by another, she converted them into the semblance of pieces of furniture by the use of blankets and other properties. When the last and favored one arrived it was too much for his rivals who all betrayed themselves.

The second faculty stunt represented the doings of the A. B. C. family.

Freshmen put on an Antony and Cleopatra stunt; the sophomores a baby show in which the prize was taken by a colored infant, Lily Snow White; the juniors a revue of types of girls—the flapper, the highbrow, athletic girls, tomboys and old fashioned girls.

The prize went to the seniors, who pictured an audience taking in a movie show. There were the boys who ran for the front seats, women shoppers loaded with bundles and many other amusing types, including the pianiste minus a piano.

Dancing completed the evening, the party breaking up about 10:45. Elizabeth and Winifred Brewer were declared winners of the prize waltz in the freshmen-sophomore gym and Cleo Redd and Alice Finn in the other gym.

While all the girls wore jinks costumes, not as much originality was shown as in some previous parties. The winner for the freshmen-sophomores represented a hobbling, wrinkled old lady dressed in black. In the senior-junior gym, Hazel Linkogel, personating a young man violin virtuoso, in typical artist costume, carried off the prize.

TRUCK AND AUTO CRASH ON EAGLE AVENUE

Auto Is Badly Smashed, But Truck Is Uninjured in Collision

Radiator, windshield, axle, hood and fenders, and in fact almost every part of the Chevrolet that could be smashed in a collision, was smashed or bent when C. A. Brugger, who lives at 132 South Royal Drive, Eagle Rock, collided with the Burbank planing mill truck driven by Gabriel Rain.

The accident occurred at 11 o'clock yesterday morning, and C. D. Bruegger, in making his report, said that he was driving south on Central avenue, and did not see the truck which was emerging from Eagle avenue. No damage was reported on the truck, but considerable damages were visited upon the Chevrolet touring car owned by Mr. Bruegger. Neither driver sustained bodily injury.

MACHINES COLLIDE

Mrs. William W. Stofft, 457 West Stocker street, and C. E. Nelson of 106 South Maryland, were drivers of machines that collided at the corner of Brand and Broadway, Glendale, at 12:30 p. m. Thursday. Little damage was done to the cars and no one was injured.

MIKE MORAN OF MULTNOMAH TEAM

Mike Moran, fulback, Multnomah Athletic Club, Portland.

He is hard as nails and hits the line like a ton of bricks, this native of the great Northwest, and he has played ball ever since he was big enough to walk. Mike Moran is coming south with the Multnomah eleven firmly determined to defeat Olympic club of San Francisco, when these two teams meet on Armistice day for the club championship of the west. Multnomah has not been defeated in so long that they have to think twice to remember the time. Last year they defeated Olympic club and expect to do the same thing this year.

FRANK ANDERSON RELEASED FROM HOSPITAL

Physicians Fail to Detect Sign of Alleged Insanity

Failure to find the defendant guilty resulted in the release today of Frank Anderson of Eagle Rock, who was taken to the psychopatic ward of the County Hospital last week for observation, upon a complaint made by his wife. Anderson was examined Thursday morning by Judge Burton C. Weyl at the County Hospital, with Attorney G. F. Ainsworth of Glendale acting as counsel.

Four witnesses in the persons of Mrs. Frank Anderson, her daughter, Dale Smith, Audrey Stetter and Dick Cammack, failed to bring satisfactory evidence as to the alleged insanity and it was the final decision of the court to give Frank Anderson over into the custody of his daughter, Mrs. Glenn Shields, of 130 S. Castle, until the board of examiners at the county hospital should place a final verdict upon his mental condition.

Prior to the trial, the bail which was previously set at $1000 on the orginal charge of disturbing the peace Mrs. Anderson brought against her husband, was lowered to $100 by Judge Cruzan, and it was generally understood today that the charge would be dropped from the books following Anderson's release on the charge of insanity.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Kerns Are Pleased With Prize

We received the third prize which was won by our son, Richard Kerns, from the Page Furniture Company, the honor certificate from the Glendale Daily Press and a large photograph in colors from Ostrom's Studio.

We want, to the ones mentioned above, to say that we prize each gift highly, that it was a fair contest, thanks to Dr. Laura Brown, her associated phiysicians, the clever nurses and Miss Gibbs of The Daily Press.

MR. AND MRS. A. J. KERNS

JOHN LAWSON HONORED BY HIS FRIENDS

Show Appreciation of Enterprise in Building Tall Structure

FIRST BIG BUILDING

Erector of Premier Four-story Business Construction Is Surprised

The banquet hall of the chamber of commerce was the scene of a delightful social event Friday evening, a surprise dinner in honor of John W. Lawson, whose friends wished to show their appreciation of his courage and enterprise in erecting the first four-story business block in Glendale at the corner of Wilson and Brand boulevard, costing $175,000. Honors were shared by another Glendalian, Alfred Priest, architect of the building.

Alexander Mitchell, who acted as chairman, introduced Mattison B. Jones as toastmaster, who explained the purpose of the banquet, thus enlightening Mr. Lawson, who was completely surprised.

Speeches were made by Mayor Spencer Robinson, representing the city council; V. M. Hollister, president of the chamber of commerce; Owen Emery, president of the Credit Men's association, and by John W. Usilton, who presented to Mr. Lawson a picture of the new building prepared by Mr. Priest, and finally a response was made by Mr. Lawson, who predicted that within five years ten-story buildings would go up in Glendale and the city would have a population of 100,000.

Between these addresses a fine musical program was given which included a vocal solo by Mrs. Helen MacMullin, accompanied upon the piano by Mrs. Spencer Robinson; vocal solos by Wilmer Herrick, a newcomer in Glendale, with Mrs. Herrick at the piano, one of his numbers being "It's Morning," by Ole Speaks; vocal selection by Mrs. Harry MacMullin with Mrs. Robinson at the piano; vocal duet, "Auld Lang Syne," by Mr. and Mrs. Spencer Robinson.

Announcement was made by Mr. Lawson that the first story and basement of his building had been leased by the Kress "5c and 10c people" for a department store, and Mrs. Lawson and Miss Edna Lawson were introduced.

Covers were laid for more than 100 and a delicious chicken dinner was served.

Police Sergeant L. B. Clayton, of Glendale, who witnessed the accident, will be called in to testify at the trial tomorrow at the city hall. Officer McMahon, who has recovered from the injury, will testify to the fact that it was due to Miner's alleged reckless driving that the accident occurred.

REAL POLITICAL PRISONERS

Mexican federal troops captured General Murgia. Without loss of time the troubles of the fire-eating rebel were over, and those of Mexico somewhat moderated. Since the days of Diaz, a regime that afforded many precedents, the lot of a political prisoner in Mexico has been dolorous. Diaz established the custom of sentencing political rivals to prison. By a singular series of coincidences there was almost invariably a failure on the part of the condemned to arrive at the prison entrance. The escort would return with the report that an attempt at escape had led to the sad necessity of killing the individual or group. Of course, there was nothing to be done. The incident was regarded as closed. The practice thus established prevails to a certain extent still.

Mexican political procedure is wholly different from that on this side the Rio Grande. Here, when a citizen opposes the government, he expresses his opinion freely. He makes speeches, or he writes pieces for the local paper. If his enthusiasm runs high, he announces himself a reformer, and in the interest of reform, becomes a candidate for something with a salary attached. Ordinarily nobody interferes, and the hand of authority is not held out to restrain him. It is only when he seeks to place a bomb under the constitution, as it were, that he attracts attention and achieves penalty.

Below the Rio Grande, the campaign begins with the gathering of armed clans, and the actual opening is a salvo of rifles. The opponent is as hostile as any alien invader, and when caught, is regarded as so guilty, that trial is waived, and the execution is immediate.

THE VOICE OF PROPHESY

The declaration that it is useless to look for a drop to pre-war prices for ten years yet, has been made. It came from a Harvard professor, and was addressed to a Boston audience. No source could have been more respectable, and no audience more worthy. Nevertheless, there appears no particular occasion for agreeing with the professor. He may be right. He may be utterly mistaken. It is not given to economists to see a decade into the future of a world wherein changes are constant, and often eventuate as surprises. The economist, it is true, has substantial data upon which to base a guess. In this respect he has an advantage over the soothsayer.

Even if the professor holds the opinion he expressed, he has failed to make a valuable contribution to current thought. The nations of the earth are striving to get back to a normal plane. The task is hard and the methods complicated. To believe that the desired end could not be attained in less than the period mentioned, would submerge the peoples of civilization in pessimism. The destruction of hope would be the worst that might occur. Working towards a goal, with the goal in reaching distance, is quite different. The struggle under a handicap thus artificially imposed, impedes the spirit of endeavor.

There is none able to affirm that pre-war conditions ever are to come again. "Where are the snows of yesteryear?" It may not be desirable that they ever should come again. Conditions, to be satisfactory, must befit the desires, and conform to the ideals. Humanity advances, or at least it makes the effort. As the progress becomes marked, the conditions of yesterday cease to meet the needs of today, and by tomorrow, may be intolerable. In other words, the establishment of the normal may bring back nothing that is gone. Normal conditions are those demanded by existing circumstances, and not necessarily in accord with circumstances of the past.

THE DAY OF VOTING

To vote is the clear duty of every citizen. Each is in some part responsible for the character of the government, for the personnel of officialdom, for the level of intelligence and probity at which the courts are maintained. Each has a voice in the matter of expenditures for public purposes. Often there are propositions of great moment to be decided at the polls. The voter who remains away is seeking to shirk a responsibility. The shirking may be accomplished, but the responsibility is not to be evaded. It is an abiding equation of citizenship.

Of course some elections are more important than others. The one soon to be held is highly important. It will involve decisions that will affect the economic complexion of California for many years. There are men to be considered as to their fitness for positions. Often there is small difficulty in making a choice. If voters do not wish to make their own selections, they may be guided by partisan counsel. But the measures that will appear on the ballot are not partisan. They are questions of the broadest public policy. They are not backed by one political organization more than by another. In no sense do they represent party sentiment, but are quite above it, and separate from it.

Every voter desirous of doing the full duty of the occasion will, so far as possible, study the merits of the various measures, not being swayed by the opinions of proponents or opponents, known to be biased in their respective views. There will be many measures. It will be impossible to form an intelligent opinion of all of them without long study and reflection. Election day draws near. There is no time to lose if voters desire to know exactly what is being put before them for a verdict.

The charge is directly made that certain metropolitan sports writers have been in the pay of devotees of some of the games. This means that instead of formulating the news, they have been spreading propaganda. A statement from the parsons accused, duly verified, would be read with interest.

Several football elevens are reported to have registered vows never to shave until victory has crowned them. The season may close with an imposing array of grid heroes each "bearded like a pard" and sorry he swore strange oaths.

Attention is called frequently to the decline in automobile prices. Some curiosity is aroused as to the reason that one line of manufacture is able to favor the public in this fashion, and other lines remain at the high level of war time, and even think this not high enough.

R.U.R.

By DR. FRANK CRANE

It is significant of the oneness of the world and the unity of the intellectual life of modern civilization that the freshest and most thoughtful play in America this season comes from Czecho-Slovakia.

Dr. Frank Crane

It is called "R. U. R.," which stands for Rossum's Universal Robots.

The idea of the play is that a scientist named Rossum discovered how to create machines that were exactly like human beings, except that they had no souls and could feel no love. These machines proved very popular, and were in great demand by employers. They could do any kind of work as well as human beings and gave no trouble.

The result was that very soon they did all the manual and clerical work of the world, and there was nothing left for human beings to do but sit around and boss them. It was found, also, that they made good soldiers, and the competing nations bought up immense quantities of them with which to fill their armies.

The result was tragedy. The Robots, even as the worm, turned and wiped out the human race.

The play is very skilfully constructed and is a delightful entertainment.

There are two kinds of entertainment supplied by the theater—one kind for those who wish to escape thinking, and the other kind for those who enjoy thinking. Most of the shows, of course, come under the former division. But there are a few people left who really take delight in working with their brains. These will enjoy "R. U. R."

The play gives rise to all sorts of reflections and speculation. The best idea that I got out of it is that when human beings cease to work they degenerate.

The salvation of the race, not only physically but intellectually and morally, comes from labor.

The true Fountain of Eternal Youth is labor.

To cease laboring with your body invites disease. To cease working with your mind invites superstition and all sorts of mental dirt. And to cease struggling with your soul is the prelude to moral collapse.

We all think we are trying to escape work. Never was there a greater delusion. What we really want is to find work, the kind of work we love, the kind of work into which we can throw ourselves soul, mind, and body, and discover in the forthputting of our energies the truest happiness.

It is true that modern invention is more and more doing the hard labor of mankind. Steam and electricity replace the efforts of millions of hands and feet. But that does not mean that we are out of a job. For invention re-employs the ousted workers again, at higher tasks and at better pay.

QUERIES

Two Problems

James K. Arnold, Cincinnati, O.: "I shall be grateful for your opinion in the following two matters of construction: A said to B: 'This is the first time I saw you today'. B remarked that 'I saw' had a foreign sound and that A should have said: 'This is the first time I have seen you today'. A agreed that 'I have seen' was preferable, but thought that 'I saw' was just as correct as the other. 'Saw,' being a preterite, was a logical substitution for 'have seen', a perfect tense, the time of both verbs being past. Was A in error? (2) C, a doctor, asked D, his patient, the following: 'Do you feel as good as you sound?' D thought C should have said 'as well as', and not 'as good as'. But he realized that feel has the qualities of a copulative verb, and, hence, ought to be followed by an adjective in agreement with the subject. If an adverb were used, it would modify 'feel', and give it the meaning of touch, which would destroy its sense in this sentence. The matter is further complicated by the presence of the verb sound, with which another 'as good as' is understood. 'To feel good' used alone seems all right, but 'to sound good' seems strange. Can you explain this matter?" Answer: First, let me make a correction in the foregoing query. Correct: B remarked that "I saw" has a foreign sound. Have seen is the present perfect tense of the verb see. This tense symbolizes action completed at some time right up to the moment a remark is made. Simply, have seen is uttered a person has seen another, and is correct in the sentence given. Well is either an adverb or an adjective: as, He acts well on the stage (adverb); He feels well (adjective). Sound may be followed by either an adverb or an adjective; as, They sounded the channel easily (adverb); The bell sounded loud (adjective). Therefore, both feel and sound may be followed by adjectives, and there is nothing wrong in the sentence, "Do you feel as well as you sound". In this sentence well functions as an adjective. D both feels well (is well), and sounds well (is well) when the doctor uses the stethoscope.

"Waked"

Rose Schloss, New York City: "Is the following correct (taken from 'The Barrier', by Rex Beach): 'It was a large sleepy house against the sunny side of the slope as if it had sought the southern exposure for warmth, and never waked up from its slumber'?" Answer: Yes. A. If it had is understood before never. Waked is correct as the past particle.

THE LISTENING POST

By James W. Foley

Not all the fallacies and delusions and bigotries and falsities of the world will stand against one simple truth.

Two times two are four.

And not all the sophistry of the world will make two times two three.

Or five.

* * *

Four is the fixed, unchangeable, eternal sum of two and two.

Or product of two and two.

And not all the elaboration of cant or creed or false logic can alter the fact.

* * *

The mind of the immature may be crammed with falsehood and delusion.

In the end it will get a glimmering of the truth.

And the minds of the mass of people may be corrupted and deluded.

In the end they will find out the truth.

* * *

Truth is the mightiest thing in the world.

Like the seed in the ground.

Its germination cannot be halted or checked.

The seed may be dug out of the ground.

Spat upon and stepped upon and ground beneath the heel.

* * *

And then cast aside.

And in the muck and dirt and darkness of the place where it was flung the process of germination goes on.

And perhaps someone will find a lily growing there in the muck heap.

* * *

A tree may begin to grow.

And a great boulder stand upon the tiny shoot of it.

Into a tiny crevice the shoot is thrust.

And patient and with irresistible force the growth of the shoot continues.

Till the rock is riven and split by a tiny green shoot.

* * *

And the trunk of the tree may be misshapen and gnarled and flattened, but it stands sturdy and strong.

Between the riven parts of the granite.

For growth is irresistible.

And it cannot be restrained or stopped more than truth can be restrained and stopped.

* * *

That which is false may flourish for a time.

As may a deadly and noxious plant.

But in the end it will be destroyed.

That which is corrupt and superficial and showy may promise much.

But eventually it will be rooted out.

* * *

The false prophet will fly to avoid destruction.

The false preachment will wither and die.

The teacher of lies will be smitten in his soul.

The liver of lies will be overthrown and humbled.

* * *

The rotten timber at the foundation will crumble and the house of lies will fall.

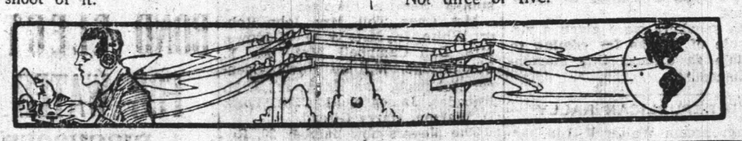
Nothing in this world abides but that which is in keeping with the plan of nature.

For it will die of itself or be rooted out.

And truth is in accord with the plan of nature.

Which is that two times two are four.

Not three or five.



Songs of the Poets

The Butterfly.—By Alice Freeman Palmer (1855-1902)

I hold you at last in my hand,
Exquisite child of the air,
Can I ever understand
How you grew to be so fair?

You came to my linden tree
To taste its delicious sweet,
I sitting here in the shadow and shine
Playing around its feet.

Now I hold you fast in my hand,
You marvelous butterfly,
Till you help me to understand
The eternal mystery.

From that creeping thing in the dust
To this shining bliss in the blue!
God give me courage to trust
I can break my crysalis too!

MAKE STEAM BY ELECTRICITY

The natural order is being reversed in a large plant in Montreal, where electricity is being used for generating steam needed for paper manufacturing, instead of the usual process of making electricity from steam. This is possible because locally the price of coal happens to be higher at this plant than the equivalent quantity of electricity.

The work is being done in the plant of the Belgo-Canadian Pulp and Paper company, which is making steam in a 20,000-kilowatt electric steam generator. The efficiency of the installation is 98 per cent of the theoretical. Thus 60,000 pounds of water are evaporated into steam per hour with apparatus that cost only about $25,000 to install. This installation cost is very much less than would have been the cost of a coal-burning plant of the same steam capacity, and it is believed that $4000 a month is being saved by the new system which replaces one which would require 75 tons of coal per day to operate.

The amount of steam generated and the pressure maintained in the boilers if governed very accurately to the quantity of steam required in the paper making. This is done very simply, as increasing or decreasing the depth to which the electrodes are immersed in the tanks accomplishes the regulation quickly and accurately.

Such installations are being considered for numerous other plants, but they will probably be possible only where very cheap electric power is available from waterpower plants. If the saving in initial cost, small space occupied by the boilers and saving of fuel becomes important, the chances for this scheme will be good. It is probable, however, that in 999 cases out of 1000 engineers will still continue to make electricity from steam, instead of using this new process of making steam from electricity.

EASTERN POINT OF VIEW

COMMUNISM WANES

[Washington Post]

The 40 per cent loss in membership suffered by the French communist party picks up the story of decline told by the elections of last year and carries it on. Manifestly communism in France is doomed as a political movement of serious proportions. The "red" lure has evidently lost its attractiveness with the temporary drifting elements that for a while accepted it as promising relief from inevitable post-war conditions. The baleful light flashed from Moscow is no longer mistaken for a beacon revealing the path to political and economic well-being.

Being in position to judge communism in comparison with sound theories of government and to classify it by results in Russia and other lands that it has blighted, the French communists are now turning from it—toward the right. This development was to have been expected in France, and is to be expected wherever else communism is judged on the basis of comparative merit.

AN UNDESIRED EXPERIMENT

[Detroit Free Press]

Arthur R. Roberts, a member of the Chicago board of trade who was summoned to testify in the inquiry now being carried on by the federal trade commission, told that body exactly how to stabilize the grain market.

Let the government, said Mr. Roberts, provide a fund of $100,000,000 with which to buy on a declining market and sell when anybody tried to corner the market and bull the price. Under that plan Mr. Roberts is confident wheat would never rise above $1.50 nor fall below $1.25.

Really there is nothing new in this theory. The government proved that it could "peg" the price of wheat during the war, but the wheat states will never forget that it absolutely refused to do the same for cotton. Therein lies one indication of why the country does not care to have Washington stabilize the grain market. There would be entirely too much politics, too much favoritism, and too much sectionalism in any such enterprise.

COMMENT ON DAY'S NEWS

By HENRY JAMES

Chester Rowell, in one of his interesting skits, classes the arts of walking and of writing, as doomed to be lost. He thinks that people ride so much that they are forgetting how to use their legs. As to writing, the neglect arises from the multiplicity of methods by which the effort may be avoided. It is to be hoped that Mr. Rowell errs. The statement that he does err is advanced respectfully.

HENRY JAMES

There has been considerable hocus-pocus concerning "lost arts." It is true, however, that certain arts have been lost, for example the hardening of metals. Just how an art while still useful, is permitted to go astray, is a mystery. Probably it is due to some cataclysm, social or physical.

People do not use the pen so much as formerly, but the ability to use it remains an essential, even a basic element in education. Despite the existence of type machines, the individual unable to write would be rated as ignorant. The public schools still function, and while it is likely they make mistakes, it is no part of their work to create, or to promote ignorance. This they would be doing if they did not send forth pupils able to write.

If Mr. Rowell does not think that people still walk, a hike over any one of a score of trails a pleasant Sunday would undeceive him. The worker in each of many trades and callings walks a large share of the time on duty. If a clerk of either sex stands all day behind a counter, or trots about the floor, the limbs sustaining him or her are not in danger of atrophy.

Years ago the bicycle was to eliminate the power of pedal locomotion. It failed quite signally. Then the automobile arrived to take up the abandoned task. It also has failed. As a matter of fact, the human family will walk to the end of time.

The leg is not the only member sentenced to vanish. In turn the teeth, the hair, the small toe, and all auricular and nasal equipment have been marked for the scrapheap; but they remain about as usual. If the process of destruction as mapped out were to be carried to a finish, man would be nothing but an invisible soul.

The rumor that Villa has been shot creates no surprise. The readiness of his own trigger-finger must have won him a long list of enemies. According to report, he was wounded by the father of one of his former generals. When the conduct of a subordinate failed to please Villa, it was his custom to kill the delinquent. This method appears to have disadvantages.

Customs collected in southern California for October exceeded those of the corresponding month of last year by more than 100 per cent. Some of the increase is attributable to the new tariff measure, but allowing for this fact, there would be enough remaining of the 100 per cent to indicate a growth entirely satisfactory.

About once in so often the Los Angeles city council passes an ordinance forbidding street parades in the downtown section. Apparently each ordinance holds good until a circus or some other to appeal to public interest desires to parade. The familiar ordinance has just been put through again, the circus season being over.

A writer states that an artist or a theatrical manager cannot judge a pretty girl any better than a bricklayer can. This view is a precise statement of a truth that will be admitted by all but the artist and the manager. The standard of beauty is arbitrary. It is likely to be set up for reasons purely personal. A girl appealing to one, as flawless in her pulchritude, might make small appeal to another observer.

A man brushing his way through the morbid crowd of low-brows fighting for entrance to the Phillips trial, denounced them all as bloodthirsty. He was excited, but the characterization was mild.

Their presence at such a place was not only the indication of meagre intelligence, putting them definitely in the moron class, but it was a sign of lingering brutishness and savagery. They hoped to hear hideous details from the recitation of which it would be the natural and sole impulse of decency to shrink. They wanted to see the woman charged with the deed, that they might picture her as possibly bound for the gallows. The spectacle gave them the chance to gloat, to shudder and to gibber. Truly a disgusting lot.

* * *

The man Phillips, husband of a woman on trial for her life, does not utter a word that rings true. He seems to be a poseur. He says that he is willing to take the blame for the whole affair. Well, let him take it, and be hanged to him.

An automobilist recently got to the end of his journey, and noticed, with surprise, that his wife, who had been in the tonneau, no longer was there. Then he remembered that he had turned a corner at high speed, and surmised that this had been enough to project the lady into the street. He went back and searched for her, but the quest was in vain. Evidently, she had escaped such injuries as might have incapacitated her for walking away. At this writing she has sent no message, and if the husband is worried about it, the experience is his due.

It is not presumption to state that a minister of the gospel is expected to conduct himself at a high moral plane. This, as a rule, he does. There are few who enter the high calling and prove to be morally unfit. When there is digression, the shock is considerable. It is greatly accentuated when an effort is made to protect the offender.

When a minister is killed by reason of his relations with women, there is no fairness in seeking to place all the blame on the women. It is to be deplored that in two present instances of wide notoriety, exactly such an effort appears to be being made.

WATCHING THE PARADE

BY JOHN PILGRIM

It's a grand thing to be well up-stage, and I'll admit it, having been a retiring and soft-voiced mutt all my life. But it does not pay to stay upstage too long. There is always a cue to quit, and the man who doesn't hear it is apt to get laughed at. Being laughed at is more fatal than German measles.

Have you seen the Ambassador lately?" they asked last night at the club. And every one tooted into broad smiles.

"Likely he's still out at the embassy," some one said.

Here is the story. Years ago he did the then current President a good turn—took his dog out to walk or something—and when the President was elected he called around for his pay. He wanted to be an ambassador, he said. His wife had plenty of money and looked fine in velvet, and he liked to have people take their hats off to him. The President was perturbed, for the caller was not of ambassadorial quality. But he could not refuse.

"All right," he said. "I'll make you a special ambassador to Mauretania."

So he went to Mauretania on a warship, with a lot of young men from the state department to see that he made no more bulls than are expected of the corn-fed ambassadors we usually pick, and conveyed our congratulations on something or other to Mauretania. At the end of twelve days he came back again. His special embassy was concluded. He hasn't been near enough to an embassy since then to hear the dogs bark, and that was a sufficient number of years ago. But the other day a fellow member at the club wanted to talk to him and called his house on the telephone.

"I'm sorry," said the person who answered the phone. "But the ambassador isn't up yet."

Once an ambassador always an ambassador may be the rule in some countries, but not here. The national sense of humor may be crude, but it is active. The club member told the story and every one figured up how long it had been since the poor man had been a special ambassador and began to ask each other if he had succeeded to a life job. They laugh at him now until his dignity is absolutely spilled.

The moral is that it is not a good idea to stay up-stage too long.

Of course there might be another moral, about paying political debts at the cost of the nation. But that would not be a popular one.

SPEED-WAGON (REO)

More than 100,000 Now in Use

Capacity, 500 to 2500 pounds

What One Factor Contributes Most Towards Speed Wagon Suitability?

ECONOMY, says the merchant. "With the Speed Wagon I can deliver 25 pounds—or 2500—quicker and cheaper than by any other method."

VERSATILITY, asserts the manufacturer. "For ten-block deliveries or hundred-mile hauls I find the Speed Wagon equally adaptable."

RUGGEDNESS, answers the farmer. "A lighter vehicle couldn't last long on my roads; a heavier truck wouldn't get through."

SPEED, exclaims the interurban bus operator. "For patrons demand a fast running time, especially when I compete or cooperate with railroads."

DEPENDABILITY, vouches the city bus owner. "For Speed Wagon operation enables me to run on strict schedules; delays would kill my profit."

SAFETY, emphasizes the school-wagon driver. "The low-hung power units and sensible distribution of weight over the wheels make it hold the road."

EASY RIDING QUALITIES, remarks the ambulance owner. "It's long springs and pneumatic cord tires give the Speed Wagon passenger-car riding smoothness."

STANDARDIZATION, says the fleet-owner. "Interchangeability of Speed Wagon parts is truly remarkable."

SPEED WAGON BUILT FOR COMFORT

"A motor caravan, built and owned by ex-Senator Clinton Shingler of Ashburn, Ga., who was a member of the Georgia senate in 1911 and again in 1919, left Atlanta the other day for Ashville, N. C., in one of the most unique traveling homes ever mounted on a Speed Wagon chassis," according to Mr. Harry E. White, of the Harry E. White, Inc.

"This bungalow on wheels is complete in every detail," says Mr. White.

"'Sparrow Nest' is embossed on the front of the machine, and the car presents a striking appearance with its panels of pale gray and green. There are tiny windows, fitted with white scrim curtains, green under-curtains, and screens; awnings shade the front seat, long awnings stretch from front to back, shading couches on which one may rest while traveling; and there is an observation platform, large enough to seat four people comfortably on camp stools with an awning stretching over this also."

VAUDEVILLE AT THE GLENDALE THIS EVENING

An attractive bill of pleasing and varied vaudeville, again comes to the Glendale, with the current road show which has been pleasing the theater-goers in this city for the past twelve months over the Bert Levey circuit. Of special note is Carl Zamlock, the well known baseball star of the eastern circuit, whose work in the box was the pillar of strength for the Cincinnati Reds in 1921. His present vaudeville offering of comedy magic should be a laugh provoker Fox-Fletcher Trio, the Christy Comedians in a fast nut comedy, offering of patter and song, and Cleveland and Trelease, the well-known musical comedy favorites will add materially to the quality of this bill. Otis Mitchell and his banjo, in a musical cycle of tuneful melodies and comedy song lyrics is another number, while The All-Star Trio, a well-balanced group of male voices will prove no small part of entertainment offered.

A Fox production of more than ordinary interest is coming to the Glendale theater tonight. It is called "Trooper O'Neil," and the star is Charles Jones. A reviewer in another city says of this film: "It is a breath of the Canadian woodlands. When the picture opens you are greeted by a scene where snow-capped peaks raise their crests, plumed with giant pines."

"Where Is My Wandering Boy Tonight," the melodramatic offering that comes to the Glendale theater beginning Sunday, promises an unusual treat for lovers of homely drama that gets under the skin. It is a splendidly photographed production and tells a story that touches every human heart and does it in a way to grip the interest and hold it in its clutch to the last flicker of the picture. "Where Is My Wandering Boy Tonight," as one can conjecture from this sentimental title, has heart interest in abundance.

The above map is indicative of the comprehensive plan that will be followed in the installation of improvements an dthe landscaping of Sparr Heights, the splendid 1500 acre residential tract in the northeastern section of Glendale, just recently placed upon the market by the Francis-Barnum-Walters company.

This development will be carried out under the superintendence of experts and will result in a community of homes that will have no peer.

Picturing this territory when the knolls, hillsides and slopes are covered with beautiful residences and elaborately landscaped estates of the wealthy, cultured class, one can realize what an asset it will be to the city of Glendale of which it is a part.

As time goes on, from Broadway, Glendale, to Broadway, Los Angeles, will be solidly built up and people who want peace and quiet will flock to such a territory as Sparr Heights for here they can enjoy the freedom of the country while still in close contact with the heart of the city.

JAZZ ORCHESTRA AND VAUDEVILLE AT THE T. D. & L.

Lopas Orientan band, a jazz orchestra of 7 Chinese-Hawaiians, who really tantalize with their wizardry of music. Ham Hamilton in his latest comedy, "The Speeder," and the Paramount feature film, "Spanish Jade," with David Powell, and Ann Forrest, constitute the diversified program at the T. D. & L. theater tonight. This program is indeed one of the most unusual offerings seen here and offers much entertainment, not always found in the usual bill.

Sunday, tomorrow, the T. D. & L. will present the famous stage play, in movies, "More to Be Pitied Than Scorned," with Philo McCullough, Alice Lake and others. A Harold Lloyd comedy will also be shown on this program.

OBSERVATIONS

BY A GLENDALE OLD TIMER

Here is a little story of thrift that may interest Daily Press readers. A few months ago a competent bookkeeper and all-around good citizen, was temporarily out of a job and had just $12.90 in his pocket. A neighbor who was running a small corner fruit and vegetable stand accosted him and offered to sell his business for $150. The man replied that he could hardly do so on a capital of $12.90. But he thought over the matter and then went to a great-hearted banker of Glendale, who believes that an honest man of strong, healthy body and the best habits, is a sound risk; this banker willingly loaned him the $150 on a personal note and the thrifty man used his $12.90 to purchase more goods. He has built up a fine trade and is prospering. Thrift pays.

—o—

There is something wrong with teaching methods when the average high school graduate cannot write good English, nor spell correctly many of the commonest words. The old-timers, many of them had a mighty hard time studying the three R's, but many of them who could crowd in only three months' schooling during the year were better spellers and writers than the average high school graduate of today. Perhaps the reason is that the student of today has such a varied line of subjects that it is impossible to do all of them well and at the same time get in all the physical exercises required. Of course the high school has nothing to do with the study of grammar and spelling, so the lack in that respect is in the grammar school curriculum. It would not be wise to cut down the athletics, so necessary to build strong bodies, but really plans should be made to see that students in the grammar schools shall be thoroughly grounded in spelling, grammar and the framing of strong, vigorous English, then the high school course will have a good foundation to build upon.

—o—

I want to heartily second a recent editorial in the Daily Press by Albert Marple on the speed maniac and how to curb his deadly activities. While a jail sentence is effective, generally, it too often works a hardship on the family of the culprit. To my notion the revocation of the speed maniac's license is about the severest punishment and in but few cases would it react upon the family of the offender. Of course if he is a truck driver or uses his passenger car in his business, depriving him of his license cuts off his income, just as a jail sentence would, but in many instances the innocent must suffer for the sins of others. If a man really cares for his family he will not violate the law and thus bring privation upon his dear ones. In the last analysis the police justice is the man who can stop traffic crimes if he will. But many of them are too flabby and let sympathy for the criminal and his family influence them to forget the rights of the victims. In the case of De Palma, a few days ago, at Modesto, if the judge before whom he appeared, charged with racing 70 miles an hour on the public highways had not been a respecter of persons, he would have sentenced that arch speed criminal to at least 30 days in jail and revoked his license for a year. His being a popular racing man should not have secured him the immunity of a pitiful 10-days jail sentence. If some of these idols of the public were given just the same treatment as ordinary people the example would be profitable. Just to prove how wide-spread is this speed mania, I want to suggest something. Go out in your machine some day, with a companion. Start in at 7 a. m and keep at it till 6:30 p. m. in order to give the scheme a thorough trial. Traverse the well-traveled highways in city and country, you driving and keeping your speedometer constantly at the 25-mile mark when in the 25-mile zone, and do similarly in the other zones. Have your companion take the numbers of all cars that pass you, then you will have a complete list of those who violate the law against speeding. And I am going to prophesy that 75 percent of the cars going in your direction will pass you. This would be an excellent way for police officers to get a line on speeders, wouldn't it? But how the courts would be crowded and jammed if this simple expedient were used. The speed trap can be worked only in certain places, so a large majority of those who exceed the speed limit are not apprehended.

—o—

There is an immense subdivision, in many units, about a mile east of the east boundary line of Los Angeles, extending north and south from Whittier boulevard half a mile and along said highway about a fourth of a mile. Houses have sprung up there like mushrooms in the last few months until now there are more than a thousand of them, and all are of the decidedly cheap variety, evidently built by men of small means. Many are mere square boxes of two rooms but to their owners they are homes. Undoubtedly this has been the fastest growing subdivision in the Southland, and while it is not at all attractive to those who live in fine houses, it shows the consuming desire of the human family for a home. Probably nowhere in the entire state can there be found as large a collection of new homes with not one showing the ownership of a family of any considerable means.

—o—

I understand a club has been organized for the study of Shakespeare's plays. There is one problem that has never yet been solved in the study of Romeo and Juliet and I suggest that the members of the new club bend all their thought and energy at the next meeting to answering this question: "Does Rom-e-owe for what Juli-et? If not does Mercuti-owe for it?" Settle this question, ladies, and you will win the applause of the whole community. And that reminds me of a statement I heard in a lecture once and, strange as it sounds, I believe it is true. It is to this effect: The oldest business corporation in the world is a certain carrier of merchandise on railway trains and this is proven by Bible history, for, in the very dawn of creation Eve was created for Adam's express company—and it has been running ever since. (N. B.—This is not original).

—o—

Celebrants of holidays in this glorious southland are not at all particular about confining themselves to the days allotted to the anniversaries, "but spread 'em out" almost without limit. Fourth of July fireworks begin to be in evidence about the middle of May and explosions continue fitfully up to the first of August. Christmas, also, is celebrated a good deal in the same long drawn out way, though Christian parents, especially, should teach their children that this sacred anniversary should never be marked with heartless noise. Hallowe'en pastimes are held early in October and Valentine gatherings begin in January. Truly, Californians endeavor to get all the enjoyment possible out of life.

—o—

Yes, we old-timers remember when round steak was 3 pounds for a quarter, the finest rib roasts 15 cents, and beef liver was given away by the butchers. We boys would hear the clatter of the knives in the bologna cutting machine and hurry to the shop to get a half-pound cut for a nickle, hot out of the oven. But—carpenters got $2 to $3 a day, painters the same, and plasterers sometimes as high as $4 a day. Plumbers were almost unknown then in small towns, and electricians had not been heard of.

—o—

I well remember Miss Marie Brehm as she was 30-odd years ago. She was an Illinois state worker in the prohibition cause and was certainly a good one. With a pleasing personality, young, healthy and vigorous, her facts and figures well in hand, she always made a favorable impression on her audiences, even though she made few converts. Although my weekly paper was stauchly republican, my father and I were heart and soul for temperance and we differed from Miss Brehm only in the methods necessary to bring about the abolition of the liquor traffic. When asked one time by Miss Brehm why I did not change my paper to a prohibition organ, I said to her that if I did I would lose practically all my subscribers and could then do nothing for the cause we both desired to see triumphant; while by standing for the cause as a republican I could disseminate arguments through the columns of my paper that would reach many people. She agreed that this was a sensible view to take and we always worked together in amity. Her meetings were always announced and her arguments given space in the columns of the paper. And though she never saw the prohibition party triumphant as a party, she has lived to see the principles she advocated so bravely and so well, become the law of the land. All honor to Marie C. Brehm and long may she live and work.

DOBLE STEAM CAR
Will Be Demonstrated in Glendale

The Doble Steam Car Will Be on Demonstration Thursday, November 9,

From 9:00 A. M. to 12:00 Noon

The Doble Steam Car is the most sensational motor car in the whole history of the motor car industry.

In building the Doble Car, Abner Doble has eliminated all the "bugs" of the steam cars of former years. He has built a car without a clutch, without transmission gears, without a drive shaft and universal joints. The Doble Car has no pilot light, no scale to remove, no frequent stops for water, no racing motor, no carbon to remove, no valves to grind, no oil pump to fail.

The Doble Car has no self starter—a simple turn of the switch and advance the throttle, and this marvelous car is G-O-N-E. In its action the Doble Car is as smooth as a bird, as powerful as a locomotive and so flexible that it leaps from one to sixty miles an hour in a few seconds.

In a word, the Doble Car is so simple, so flexible, so powerful, so silent, so durable, so far superior to any other automobile that a new set of standards is necessary to gauge its worthiness.

"Advertising Orange Blossom Coffee" Santa Ana, Cal., Oct. 6, 1922

The Read-Miller Co.,
120½ S. Broadway, Los Angeles, Cal.

Gentlemen: In reply to your inquiry as to what form our advertising for the season of 1922-1923 shall take, will say that we have given the matter careful consideration and have concluded that we had best stick to the newspapers.

Many other forms of adverrtising have been urged upon us and some of them have merit, but upon the whole we believe we get the best results from the local newspapers and you may arrange to place very much the greater portion of our appropriation in that field.

We are especially pleased with the results we have received through advertising in the Glendale Daily Press.

Very truly yours,
ET SMART & FINAL CO.
(Signed) J. S. Smart, Pres.

EASTERN DESIGNER OF MILLINERY IS HERE

Miss Virginia Gorham to Be at Brand Department Store Saturday and Monday

An unusual and unexpected treat is in store for the thousands of customers and friends of the Brand Department store, 233 and 235 North Brand boulevard, in the appearance on Saturday and Monday at that establishment of Miss Virginia Gorham, chief designer of Burgesser Hats, Inc., of New York. This distinguished visitor will assist in the opening of the new millinery department of that store, which event has been anxiously looked forward to by many of the ladies of Glendale.

Throughout Saturday and until 9 o'clock in the evening, also Monday, Miss Gorham will discuss with the ladies of Glendale the present styles in vogue in the eastern part of the country and also the very newest styles that the designers of Paris are forecasting for the coming spring and summer.

Miss Gorham is now enjoying her initial visit to Southern California, and during her stay here her advice as to the prevailing eastern fashions in millinery and the forecast for the future have been eagerly sought by those who realize her ability along this line.

Concerning the charms of Southern California Miss Gorham is extremely enthusiastic. She is completely taken with this section, and further believes that of all of this part of the country Glendale is the most apealing spot. During her stay here she has met quite a number of the residents of Glendale and it is mainly on account of her liking for the people here that she has consented to assist in this opening at the Brand Department store, and by so doing, delay her return to the east.

Within a short time Miss Gorham will leave for Europe, where she will spend several weeks in the work of delving deeper into the hidden mysteries of the creation of millinery styles and fashions. As she has done in the past she will confer extensively with the style originators, and will bring to this country ideas along the millinery line that are as up to the minute and modern at that time as those she will explain to the ladies of Glendale are at the present moment.

On account of a little misunderstanding it was announced yesterday that Miss Gorham's visit had already taken place. The many Glendale ladies who have expressed their regret at not being able to talk with this talented lady will be pleased to learn that her visit here is still to come—that all the ladies of Glendale will have a chance to confer with her on Saturday.

TREGEA'S IS SHOP OF BEAUTIFUL ART IN GIFTS

Quite a story is connected with the advent in Glendale of Mr. and Mrs. Tregea, who have just opened the beautiful gift shop in the Monarch building on the Harvard street side. They came here from San Francisco, where Mr. Tregea for years had been at the head of the watch department in the establishment of the Shreeve Jewelers. They had been considering a change to sunny Southern California and their wavering inclinations were fixed by the tales which a traveling man of their acquaintance told them about Glendale. They have been here since June waiting for the completion of the Monarch building and in that time their admiration for our city has developed into real affection.

Mr. Tregea has just accepted a position with Fagan's jewelry store in Los Angeles and Mrs. Tregea will run the business, which is her own enterprise, with the assistance of her sister. She will specialize in hand-painted china for which she creates her own designs and expects soon to install a firing oven. In addition to this she will handle pictures, a few toys, and dainty novelties of many sorts.

Chief Stone of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers was discussing government ownership. "Government ownership," he said, "certainly got a black eye during the world war. The way governments ran the railroads and other things was a caution. And yet all these governments were as conceited over their work as the man who was asked if he believed in heredity. 'Do I believe in heredity?' he chortled. 'You bet I do. Why, I've got three of the brightest children you ever saw.'"

THE BLESSEDNESS OF DREAMS

When I sit on the walk with her and lay
My slate and books aside upon the way
To school and tell her all the happy dreams
Of fame and fortune, why, it almost seems
There is no sadness in the world at all,
And when the schoolhouse bell begins to call
Us back to duty we must lay aside
The precious dreams which we have just untied
Like picture books from off a Christmas tree,
With pictures, Oh, so bright and fair to see.

But Oh, what comfort it is when we know
That though the clock hands move so very slow
The time will come when school is out and then
We'll open up our picture books again
And she will sit beside me the same way,
And she'll believe most every word I say,
When by the strength of my right arm I swear
No queen or princess ever looked so fair,
As she does now and as she did look when
I met her first, world without end, amen.

What do we care how long the lesson seems?
Some day we'll close our books and then our dreams
Will all come true and then the schoolhouse door
Will close behind us both forevermore,
Oh solemn, solemn thought! And after while
When we have settled down and made our pile
We'll see the little children as they pass
With books and slates upon their way to class,
And understand them better because they
Are only you and me the other day.

The Once Over

By H. I. PHILLIPS

THE SHOOTING by Jawn McGraw
(After R. W. Service)

A bunch of the fans were whooping it up in the lee of Coogan's Bluff,
Declaring the Yanks were a sure thing and shooting that kinda guff;
In a new soft hat in a dugout sat the Dangerous Jawn McGraw
A-reading the sporting experts' views and laughing a hoarse hee-haw.

When out of the mists of the "ifs" and "ands" and into the din and the glare,
There stumbled a party called Old Man Dope, who seemed to be loaded for bear.
He looked like a man who was hep to the facts and knew the results in advance;
"The Yankees can't lose," he declared with a roar, as he pulled out a book from his pants.

Now all of us knew the dopester well and took his word for law,
And we drank his health—but the last to drink was the Dangerous Jawn McGraw.

* * *

There's men that somehow just ooze with facts till they cast a sort of spell.
And such was he, and he looked at me like a man as was smart as hell.
He had figures thick just to prove the trick could be done by the Yanks with ease.
And he'd quote 'em in a manner proud to prove that the "Jints" were chees.
Then I got to figgerin' Old Man Dope and thinking his boasting raw,
And I turned my head—and there watching him was the Dangerous Jawn McGraw.

* * *

Then, on a sudden, the upset came with a smash and a crash of bats
And the air was thick with a paper storm and a hail of flying hats;
And you felt, if you were a Yankee fan, you'd been thrown for a total loss
That some one had socked you between the eyes; that dope was the apple sauce.
'Twas the crowning cry of a heart's despair, and it chilled your dying hope—
"That's only a flash; just mark my words," said, sullenly, Old Man Dope.

* * *

The batting almost died away . . . then it burst like a pent-up flood;
And it seemed to me, from what I could see, that the Yankees' name was mud.
The thought came back of the ancient bunk and it stung like a frozen lash
And the lust awoke to kill the pill . . . as each Giant took a smash.
Then this Dope man turned and his eyes they burned in most peculiar way;
In a thick blue funk, with a book of bunk, he stood and I saw him sway;
Then his lips went in, in a kind of grin and he spoke and his voice was thick;
"Now, boys," said he, "you all know me—I'm the expert's real side-kick,
And I want to state, and my words are straight, though they may seem rather raw,
That somebody's slipped me the double cross. . . . and that one is Jawn McGraw!"

* * *

Then I ducked my head and some more bats flew . . . and men scampered round the park;
For five full days the battle raged (though one of 'em was dark);
There pitched on his head lay the Dopester, dead, his body a mass of slug
While dangerous Mac had his foot on the back of the Lady that's known as "Hug."

* * *

These are the simple facts of the case, and I guess I ought to know;
They say the stranger was full of bunk and I'm not denying it's so.
I'm not so wise as these "expert" guys, but still I'm no dumbbell mope—
The way to win out in a world series bout is never to follow the dope!

When it comes to stepping into a fortune no man objects to putting his foot into it.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK—

By E. R. WAITE,
Secretary Shawnee, Okla., Board of Commerce

That your city should be aggressive and progressive.

That it's simply great to be a wideawake business man in a wideawake city.

That what you think and what you do, makes you what you are. Think wisely.

That common sense should point out to every citizen the importance and economy in buying at home.

That in these days of high pressure business and scientific competition, business men and business houses can succeed only by being careful students of economic forces and fundamentals.

That one of a city's greatest insurance against business depression is a diversity of its sources of income, such as farming, manufacturing, jobbing and retail businesses. Each one of these enterprises is a separate source of wealth and a separate source of income to a certain quota of its citizens and the failure of any one of them would not create a big depression as the balance of its sources of income would be able to carry the temporary load.

That the surest way to get satisfactory results in any undertaking is to find the best method of doing the job and then get busy and do it.

EDITORIALS By the PEOPLE

Mr. Thomas D. Watson,
Glendale, Calif.
Dear Mr. Watson:

At the election on November 7 the voters will be called upon to decide whether the "Lawyers' bill" shall become a law or not. This is Proposition No. 24 on the ballot.

It has been our practice in the past to advise with our depositors and other customers relative to business transactions, and to answer questions involving simple business law.

We would like to continue this present service to our customers, but if the "lawyers' bill" is approved by the voters at the next election, such service by this bank will be prohibited.

We joined with others in securing a referendum on this bill, because we believed it to be contrary to the interests of our customers, and against public welfare. Under this law it will be a crime to render this service, a burden of useless expense will be put upon the public, and well informed business men will be denied the privilege of assisting their friends and customers.

The effect of the law is to force the public to go to lawyers for advice and assistance in simple matters that can now be given to them freely and satisfactorily by business men. The act is ambiguous and uncertain and the lawyers cannot agree as to what it means.

We believe that your best interests will be served by the defeat of this law and therefore ask that you vote NO on Referendum Proposition No. 24, and that you urge other voters to do the same.

Yours very truly,
D. H. SMITH,
Manager, Brand Blvd. Branch, Pacific-Southwest Trust and Savings Bank, Glendale.

WONDER CITY WILL GROW AT SPARR HEIGHTS

How often we hear the complaint: "If I had only known," or "If I had been on the ground in the early days, I would have been a millionaire now," from those living in Los Angeles today, says an enthusiast of the Francis-Barnum-Walters sales force. Other observations follow:

It seems strange that they cannot realize that more numerous and better opportunities for profitable investment exist today than ever before. In the early days this section developed as a baby creeps, but now it is advancing with such giant strides that it has caused the whole world to marvel at its phenomenal progress.

From a town of 50,000 population, 30 years ago, with dirt streets and board sidewalks and one-horse street cars, its growth to its present status seems marvelous. Then we consider the fact, however, that Los Angeles advanced from twenty-seventh to sixth place industrially in seven years and that 575 new industries were established within the last year, even her early progress seems slow.

The promise for the future is even more brilliant. With such projects as the Hollywood Bowl, the great stadium at Exposition park, the Goodyear plant, the Union Pacific development, the Biltmore hotel, the San Juan project, the Colorado development, Palos Verdes and Sparr Heights already started and others, too numerous to mention, yet to come, there remains not a doubt that the propheey made many years ago, that Los Angeles will be one of the two largest cities in the world, will be verified.

The technical skill, artistic, dramatic and musical talent, together with the dollars of hard headed, cold blooded financiers are all focusing here.

Are we, that are on the ground, too close to this development to realize its scope and importance?

When trained observers like Roger Babson, Arthur Brisbane, Forbes and Hinman, whose business for years has been to observe and note economic development, all over the world, prophesy that California will be the most densely settled and intensively cultivated section of the United States and that Los Angeles will be, if not the greatest, at least the second largest city in the Union, is it not time for us, who are on the ground, to sit up and take notice?

Never forget that population means values and choice residence districts are always on the hills. Within the memory of the writer 39th street, New York, was a mass of rocks of such little value that it was covered with the shanties of Irish squatters. Today the finest hotels and apartment houses in the world occupy the same site and the value of the land has become almost fabulous.

This is, in spite of the fact that this district, like "Topsy," "just growed." How much more marvelous will be the result when in an absolutely virgin territory, noted for its scenic beauty, a city is planned from the very beginning along broad and comprehensive lines under the supervision of technical experts.

We recognize the fact that at Sparr Heights we are, in one sense, painting a picture that will be spread permanently over this beautiful section for posterity to admire or condemn.

FAIRVIEW TRACT BECKONS HOME BUYER

"Fairview" has been on the lips of the real estate men and lot buy buyers of this section for the past several months. Whenever the word is spoken it naturally makes one think of the quickly-growing residential section in the northwestern part of the city. It naturally makes one think of dozens and dozens of enterprising families who are making an earnest effort to get away from the bugbear of paying rent and to get something in this world that they can really call their own.

Nine large units of the Fairview tract have been placed on the market during thep ast few months and all of them have been totally sold out. The tenth unit was announced several weeks ago and this is now being disposed of rapidly. Lots in this tract are now being offered at $750, with a down payment of $25 and $15 per month. These are full sized lots, exceptionally deep and run back to a 15-foot alley.

"If you are not able to put up a permanent home at the present time," say the members of this firm, "we will permit you to erect a temporary structure, providing it is of neat construction. In this way your rent money will be diverted in the investment channel and you will eventually pay for your own home at a less monthly expenditure than if you were paying rent."

The office of the firm that has been so successful in presenting the Fairview tract to the world is located at 203 West Broadway.

NO DISCOUNT FOR OPENINGS

When a plastering contractor computes his cost he figures all area as straight work, because the reveals around the windows and doors will cost the same to finish as if there was no opening at all.

RECORD IS MADE AT GLENVIEW ACRES

One of the most remarkable records laid down by any subdivision in Glendale was made in connection with Glenview Acres, the tract in the northwest part of the city that is being promoted by W. L. Truitt, 812 South Brand boulevard. This consists of half of the lots in this tract being sold before the formal opening announcement was made. Practically all of the buyers in this tract thus far are local investors who have been waiting for some time for the opening of this piece of land.

"There is no secret about this remarkable record," said Mr. Truitt this morning. "Discriminating buyers appreciate the fact that I am offering the very highest class of foothill property below the market and on easy terms. Improvements are in and restrictions prevent temporary shacks. I am undertaking to finance and build homes on this property."

ROLAND SQUARE HAS FINE HOME CONSTRUCTION

That home-builders of Glendale are intent upon keeping up the high standard of construction that has obtained in this city, is manifested in the buildings now in course of construction in Roland Square, that fine, highly restricted tract between Doran street and the city park at Patterson.

One has but to visit this tract and inspect the homes that are now being built there to be convinced that this tract will be a truly show place of the city. There are now eight residences of the highest type being erected, all large and of the most modern architecture, and it is understood that a number of other buildings of a similar nature are only awaiting the delivery of the material.

Of the 102 lots that originally composed the tract when it was opened scarcely more than a month ago by the J. R. Grey Realty company, of 124 North Brand boulevard, there remains unsold at the present time but 22 lots, making it plainly visible how popular and desirable this section was held. And it is pleasing to note that most of the purchases in Roland Square were made by citizens of Glendale who desired a real home in a section of the city where restrictions, class and neighborhood all combined to make it the most desirable place to locate.

The transformation of Roland Square during the past month is almost beyond description. The sidewalks and curbs are all in, the water has been installed throughout the entire tract, electricity is there, and just as soon as the gas mains are laid, which has been promised for this coming week, the streets will be paved and all the improvements that were advertised as going to be put in will have been accomplished. This speaks well for the Grey company, as many were skeptical when the tract opened as to whether or not these improvements were going to be fulfillied as promised.

In speaking of the unprecedented sale of lots in this tract this morning, Mr. Grey said:

"While we were most optimistic when the tract was first opened as to our ability to sell the lots, we must confess that we had no idea that they would be sold so rapidly. It seems that the citizens of Glendale were alive to the desirability of Roland Square as a home section, and few hesitated when such a location could be secured at the prices the lots were offered for. It is almost a certainty that not a lot in Roland Square can be purchased six months from now for less than $2000, the class of buildings now under construction being evidence of this."

When it is known that valuations of lots entirely surrounding Roland Square are greatly in excess of those offered in this tract, it is readily understood why Roland Square is moving so rapidly, and why a sharp advance in present prices must shortly occur.

PROVIDING MONEY FOR NEW HOME

Buying the lot is probably the most important step toward ownership, but the greatest problem for the person of moderate means is "footing the bill."

Too many good people hesitate all their lives because they are afraid to take on the burden of several years' payments on a home of their own.

Yet they go on paying to someone else the same amount each month in rent that would buy the place if they had a contract to purchase it.

Some say they could not take a chance of possible sickness or misfortune preventing their meeting payments as they come due.

Would they be any better off if unable to meet the rent?

So, you see, we must face this unavoidable obligation, to make regular payments for housing, whether to a landlord for the use of his property or to apply on the purchase price of our own home.

Too much time is seldom given to study of the house plan, so this step may be perfected while saving for the home.

Saving is a virtue entirely neglected by many people who regularly spend enough over and above a plain good living to build up an impressive total if it were banked.

For such as these, who never would start a savings account and add to it regularly, the home purchase contract is a real blessing, starting them on the Thrift Road to independence.

There is a number of methods for financing your home-building operations, suited to every condition and purse.

For the person with sufficient means to pay cash for everything as he goes, there is no problem, except that, if in a profitable business, he will prefer borrowing a part of the money at 7 per cent for the house and place his money at a higher rate in his business.

Many standing mortgages are thus accounted for.

Most homes are built by lot owners with enough money to partly pay for the house. A mortgage for any amount up to 60 per cent of the value of house and lot provides the amount needed to make up the remainder.

This money may be obtained at a savings bank at 7 per cent interest, and is usually allowed to run for a number of years. Insurance companies and title or trust companies make generous loans to home builders.

Building loan associations are in business for this purpose also.

These are usually preferable to borrowing from friends or brokers.

If the prospective home builder has only a clear lot, he can still realize his dreams by placing a second mortgage against the property so as to realize more than 60 per cent of the total value.

In some cases this is not advisable, but is often preferable to continue tenancy under unpleasant conditions and has proven very good business by thousands of Glendale home owners.

Because of the greater risk, the second mortgage is usually placed at a higher rate of interest than the first, and a bonus may be required.

The builder is sometimes willing to take the second mortgage on his payment.

A number of concerns in Glendale are selling homes complete for a nominal down payment and about 1 per cent per month thereafter until paid for.

This is a simple method of acquiring title to your home if you can get the place that pleases you, but the cost is usually higher.

The best advice a friend could give you at this stage is to do your own figuring and reduce everything down to "rate of interest" on fair valuation.

And provide your finances before starting the building, for a responsible contractor should be assured he is dealing with a responsible owner.

REALTOR SHOULD PROTECT BUYER

There are certain points in the housing problem for which real estate men are especially responsible.

They can at once see that illegitimate fees, commissions and bonuses are not exacted. It is generally recognized that the practices of a few may do a great deal to undermine the confidence of the public in homes as investments.

Then the small home owner must look to his agent for advice on the largest investment he may ever make and one which vitally affects his happiness.

The prospective owner can be counseled not to buy a home beyond his means, and should be given a close estimate on all probable expenses involved in maintaining his property.

The responsibility of a man negotiating the sale of a small house is even greater than that of the savings bank which invests its depositors' funds.

COUNTRY HOME SERVICE PLANT

Answer—For an ordinary family a complete plant for light and pumping with air pressure tank for water can be installed for about $400. This includes a gasoline or kerosene engine and dynamo, storage batteries, a motor-driven water pump and an automobile air pump with a heavy tank for carrying water under pressure. This entire equipment can be placed in a small space and will supply water at the rate of 200 gallons per hour.

HOW TO SELECT CALIFORNIA FLOWERS

When considering our native California plants it is most natural with the first impression to think that they all love sunny warmth and dry hillside, particularly here in the Southland where our rainfall is much lighter than in the northern part of the state.

This is an erroneous impression, however, which further consideration will correct, for many of our good shrubs thrive only on northern slopes or under overhead growth which affords shade and conserves the winter rainfall.

A number of these shade-loving bushes are highly ornamental when in flower, some are desirable for their berries, others for their foliage.

The California buckeye exhibits a striking display of bloom in the springtime, the flowers being borne in large, cylindrical clusters of white or pinkish white.

Other forms of this tree, Aesculus Californica, are familiar to all Easterners as the buckeye, or horse chestnut.

The leaves of our California form a large palmate and of a bright green. It will grow in the sun, likes the shade and as a chief fault is deciduous.

The wild currants and gooseberries of California are generally very lovely when in flower, but have, as a drawback, the characteristic of shedding their leaves and becoming dormant during the hot, dry months of summer.

All of them like shade and moisture, although certain varieties will flourish in full sun.

They are beautiful during the winter and spring and deserve a place in winter gardens which it may be necessary to neglect throughout the summer.

The wild gooseberry, Ribes hesperium, has a delightful, soft-green foliage somewhat similar to our cultivated gooseberry.

The stems and leaves are very thorny. Greenish-red flowers are followed by prickly fruits looking like a spiney gooseberry.

Ribes tenuiflorum is our yellow flowering currant, which suckers from the ground quite like the garden currant.

It is bare during the summer, but from mid-winter to spring it is covered with a mass of yellow flowers.

TRAIN ROBBERS KILLED

WITTEMBERG, Mo., Nov. 4.—The bodies of Jack Kennedy, 55, of Memphis, and Harvey Logan, 21, bandits who made the daring but unsuccessful attempt to hold up Frisco train No. 805 from St. Louis to Memphis, were held in the morgue here today.

It's a wise worm that stays under cover and deprives the early bird of his breakfast.

$25,000 WORTH OF LOTS SOLD IN WEEK

Half Page Ad in Glendale Daily Press Followed by Sunday Buying

Twenty-five thousand dollars in lot sales this week is the amazing record for Glendale Heights, according to Mr. Haddock, president of the Haddock-Nibley company.

"We ran a half page ad in the Glendale Daily Press last Saturday, October 28," said Mr. Haddock, "and Sunday was characterized by one of the heaviest sales days we have had in our experience thus far. Glendale Heights was opened January 15 of this year. It was then but a hillside pasture with a wire fence running up through the middle of it from Palmer street to the top of the hill. Today it has been subdivided into approximately 450 lots, and out of these there are a scarce hundred remaining.

"Adams street, a finished, oiled and gravelled throughfare now bisects the property from the hilltop to its junction with Palmer street and radiating from this main thoroughfare is a series of beautiful winding hillside drives. Along the sides of these drives, a veritable forest of all varieties of trees is now being planted. Curbing, cement sidewalks, gas, electricity and electric lights are all on the tract and available for building, and twenty- three typical California homes already adorn the property and fully that many more are at present under construction and contemplation.

"One of the particularly pleasing features of our operations," said Mr. Haddock, "is the fact that over 99 per cent of Glendale Heights has been sold to Glendale people. This, we consider a tribute to our mutual judgment. First, to the fact of our foresight in laying out this choice property, and secondly to the good judgment of the people of Glendale who appreciate that right here at home in their own city, is the best opportunity for making 'money make money,' to be found anywhere in the world. Any person who invests money in one or more lots with any degree of judgment in or around Glendale, cannot fail to realize on their investment" says Mr. Haddock. "The growth of Glendale is just beginning, and I look for it to continue by leaps and bounds, and in fact—at a much faster ratio than has characterized its already remarkable past. At the present rate at which Glendale Heights is moving, we will have the entire property sold out before the close of this present year, which will be a very gratifying culmination for our eleven months operation on the same."

TOWN OF ROSCOE IS RAPIDLY GROWING

The attention of thousands of investors is being turned to the budding town of Roscoe, which is located just a few miles north of Burbank on the San Fernando road. For years and years Roscoe was nothing but a location for an oil station. It was just a little wayside point between Burbank and San Fernando.

A few months ago Irving W. Bigger, who has been extremely active in the northern end of the valley for the past few years, began operations at Roscoe. He put into the place some of the enthusiasm and energy that has made the sale of his tracts in Burbank such a wonderful success, and the result has been that the town of Roscoe now exists. The visions Bigger had of Roscoe a few months ago are quickly coming true. The town is growing like a weed and right there the foundation for fortunes is being laid.

Listen to the way Mr. Bigger describes Roscoe and the activity that is going on there:

"An important city in the making. That is what is now taking place at the intersection of Sunland road and San Fernando road—the heaviest traveled boulevards in Southern California. Factories, stores, houses and other buildings have arisen like magic on land that but a few months ago was unoccupied. The developments that have already occurred are being increased daily with powerful indications of the vastly greater growth that is certain to come in the future.

"All of this spells opportunity for you to make money, provided you have the vision and the foresight to take advantage of the present low prices of land in the new city of Roscoe.

"There are three ways to grow at Roscoe. First, buy an acre or two, start a poultry ranch and make a living while your property enhances in value. Second, build a home on a town lot at Roscoe, temporary homes permitted. Save rent and get the increase in the value of your land. Third, buy a business lot at Roscoe. There is a vital need today for hardware, clothing and drug stores, garages and other business houses.

"There are 1600 people ready to buy and the number is growing rapidly."

It is but a step by auto to the town of Roscoe. Prospective buyers and home owners are invited to take a jaunt up to Roscoe and see how things are booming there.

CALLS FOR EAGLE GLEN HEIGHTS NUMEROUS

Eagle Glen Heights, the magnificent residential tract which is being developed by the J. Harvey McCarthy company at the east end of Broadway, is attracting numerous prospective buyers from Los Angeles and the Hollywood district, according to Mr. McCarthy. These intending home-buyers, he explains, are finding that Glendale offers residential inducements that are unsurpassed in any Southern California community adjacent to Los Angeles. The appeal, which is particularly strong in their minds is the fact that they can build in the foothills, away from the traffic congestion and fog, and at the same time, be within easy reach of their business and have the advantages of Glendale's superior schools for their children.

The Eagle Glen Heights property comprises approximately 24 acres and has been subdivided into 93 lots, all with an unusually sightly view of the surrounding country, extends back from East Broadway into the ri mof the foothills and is so situated that every lot has an unobstructed view. Immediately after he acquired the property last summer, Mr. McCarthy commenced an extensive development program which included the installation of utilities and laying out of streets. The paving, sidewalks and curbing are practically all in, and what remains of this work to be done will be rapidly pushed to completion. Six homes of an especially beautiful type are now in course of construction, and, according to Mr. McCarthy, ten more will follow this year. While the majority of these homes are being built for persons already identified with Glendale, a number will be for families who expect shortly to move into this community.

Aside from such advantages as its nearness to the business section of Glendale and its beautiful scenic surroundings and the substantial and permanent character of the development, Eagle Glen Heights is withi na block of the new Glendale high school, which will be erected in the near future to accommodate the increasing educational demands of this city. According to the Glendale authorities, this will be one of the finest high school buildings in the west. The cost for building and equipment, approximately $600,000, was provided for in the recent bond election.

The Eagle Glen Heights subdivision is in charge of H. V. Henry, resident sales manager for the J. Harvey McCarthy company. Mr. Henry, who has long been identified with real estate and subdivision activities in this vicinity, regards Glendale as the most promising community in Southern California. He said yesterday that he was convinced that the city would soon reach the 50,000 mark in population, its phenomenal growth within the past year offering convincing proof of this.

"Glendale has so many advantages for both residents and business that it is naturally attracting population," Mr. Henry pointed out yesterday. "We look for a greater growth during the coming year than we have heretofore experienced in any corresponding period, and from this growth will come a demand for hundreds of new homes, commercial structures and civic improvements. The outlook is one of tremendous promise."

WONDER TRACT IS GRIFFITH PARK GARDENS

One of the latest tracts to be offered to home buyers is "Griffith Park Gardens," which lies a half mile north of the Los Feliz boulevard and three blocks west of the San Fernando road. It adjoins Griffith park, the largest municipal park in the United States, on the east, and is near the park's golf grounds and recreation center. It is also near the west boundary of Park avenue, Glendale, which it is proposed to extend through the Griffith Park Gardens into Griffith park, via a bridge over the Los Angeles river.

Griffith Park Gardens has been subdivided into 76 large lots. The tract is being provided with every modern convenience—water, gas and light already being in, and the streets will be rounded up and oiled.

"The Griffith Park Gardens," says the manager of the Albert H. Beach company, 1025 Marsh-Strong building, Los Angeles, owners of the tract, "comprises about the last of the available acreage for homes in the southwest section, there having been more than two thousand lots made from acreage and sold in that section. Higher prices have been charged in the past for lots in this section than we are going to start ours at, the reservation price being $500 and up."

WATCH OUT FOR WINTER TROUBLE

"The winter days are coming and the wise motorist will not wait until the last minute to have his car put in good shape before the heavy rains of winter come," said "Ferg" of the Standard garage, corner Kenwood and Broadway, this morning. "The fellow who puts the matter off when he might have the car repaired is the man who is compelled to wait for his machine at the time when he needs it the worst.

"We are prepared to give expert and prompt service in connection with the repair of the machines brought to us."

This Judge Beats Wife-Beater

Magistrate Edward Burke.

Magistrate Edward Burke, also an alderman, of Pittston, Pa., heard the charges of wife beating against Anthony Azakas and, after fining him $10, left the bench and walloped Anthony in the eye. Anthony took the count, but Judge Burke dragged him to his feet and knocked him down again.

"Now we'll see how he likes it," he said and resumed his judicial poise. His unique legal decision proved exceedingly popular.

SOMETHING NEW IN CONCRETE

After years of endeavor, the feat of making a non-porous concrete that finishes like marble, has been accomplished.

Some believe that the Egyptian pyramids are built of such materials. The old idea that the massive blocks with which the pyramids were built were hauled a great distance from the marble deposits across the desert, has been discarded by certain savants.

Even with modern machinery such a feat would be impossible, as many of these blocks weighed four hundred tons.

Some scientists believe that the pyramids were built of concrete mixed with the desert sands right on the spot.

GARDEN BASKETS

Summer may be over, but the amateur gardener knows that there still remains much to be done about the garden before the first frost sets in. English garden-baskets of strong wicker, lined with leather and roomy enough for the gardening tools and the flowers as well, are shown.

TEACHERS' SUMMER SCHOOLS

One-fourth of the 700,000 teachers in the United States are said to attend summer school.

GLENOAKS COURSE WILL BE A WONDER

The golf course to be located in the beautiful Scholl canyon, which has been named Glenoaks for subdivision purposes, will, if expectations are realized, be one of the most beautiful and picturesque features of its kind in California. The floor of the valley, surrounded as it is by the most beautiful of foothills upon which hundreds of magnificent homes will be constructed, makes an ideal situation for a feature of this kind. Something like 200 acres are being purchased by the syndicate of capitalists, which is prompting this feature, the idea being to spare nothing in making this one of the leading clubs and courses in the country.

A short time ago William Watson, one of the leading golf course experts in the country, made a trip to Glenoaks to ascertain the chances of constructing a golf course on the floor of this beautiful valley. His findings are embodied in the following letter:

"In compliance with your request I have made a careful examination of the proposed ground for a golf course, situated on the Glenoaks tract. One's first impression on viewing practically the whole territory from the knoll in the center of the tract, is the large amount of usable space there is, in almost all directions.

"With a clubhouse on this knoll, an ideal situation presents itself, inasmuch as three loops of nine holes each can be arranged to start and finish at that point, and thus three different combinations of 18 holes can be arranged on these same three loops.

"There is room, also, for a fine polo field, directly in view from the site of the proposed clubhouse. The soil is light and open, a most desirable condition for the growing of the finest grasses. It is easily worked and will produce a deep, springy sod that will stand severe punishment, and at the same time will give the bite and control of a well-played ball.

"I have laid out and improved a great many courses in California, but none of them seem to have the same possibilities as are shown in the tract you are interested in. Let me mention a few samples of my work:

Annandale—Pasadena.
Flintridge—Pasadena.
San Gabriel—San Gabriel.
Hill Crest—Los Angeles.
Sunset Canyon—Burbank.
Virginia—Long Beach.
LaCumbre—Santa Barbara.
LaJolla—LaJolla.
San Diego—Chula Vista.
Berkeley—Berkeley.
Burlingame—Burlingame.
Lincoln Park, Municipal Course; Municipal Course, Lake Merced, San Francisco.
Mount Diablo—Diablo.
Lakeside, Lake Course; Lakeside, Ocean Course, San Francisco.
These latter two are for the Olympic Athletic club, San Francisco.

The advantages of your scheme may be enumerated as under:

Its accessibility from Los Angeles, Glendale or Pasadena.
Abundance of water.
Beautiful wooded hills completely surrounding the territory.
Economy of construction, no tearing down required and very little excavation necessary.
The uniqueness of so many combinations of play.
With so many exquisite dwelling sites all around the property the possible landscape effects are without limit.

If it would assist your project in any way, I would be glad to meet your committee or any of your friends interested in the ground, to explain the various possibilities in view and to point out as I see it, the splendid opportunity you have for the development of a most unique and wonderful undertaking.

KNIGHT & LEWIS ARE HERE TO STAY

The Knight & Lewis company is one of the new real estate firms in Glendale, and judging from the way the company has started out it will be one of the most active firms here before many moons. The members of this firm claim that during the short time they have been here they have done a very satisfactory amount of business and the prospects for the future are extremely bright.

This firm is composed of J. W. Knight, J. W. Lewis and D. Ernest Forsythe, all of whom have been in the real estate and insurance business for the greater portions of their lives. They are now comfortably located at 226 South Brand boulevard. This firm is doing a general insurance and real estate business, and it has for its chief desire the providing of real service along these lines for the people of Glendale. In scope its business will extend over the cities of Glendale and Eagle Rock and also will run up into the Verdugo Woodlands and Montrose sections. It is right now making a specialty of the resale of Verdugo Woodlands property, both vacant and improved.

"It is a pleasure for us to please our friends," said Mr. Forsythe this morning. "Our aim is not only collect commissions but to provide real service to the people of this section. We are here to stay and to do our part in the upbuilding of Glendale and vicinity."

MONTROSE, THE DREAM TOWN, WHERE VISIONS ARE MATERIALIZING

Montrose, the town where dreams come true, is at this time experiencing an era of growth that would do credit to cities several times its size.

The people of Southern California are just realizing the value of Montrose and the surrounding territory as a home center. All roads are leading to that budding community. These roads are carrying thousands of people weekly and those who see that beautiful valley are deciding to change thier mail addresses.

Nothing can hold Montrose back. It has started on a forward move that cannot be checked. It is absolutely sure to progress.

There is a reason for the realty and building activity that Montrose is experiencing. That reason is that that place is one of the most beautiful and healthful localities in Southern California, which means the world. It is ideally situated, its climate is wonderful, its scenery cannot be surpassed.

Montrose is truly a "town of dreams"—where visions come true.

---MONTROSE---
The Gem Foothill City--
Is Taking on New Life--

Montrose was subdivided in 1912 by Holmes & Walton. With the advent of the war there resulted a loss of a quarter of a million dollars in this tract. The subdivision was dormant until September, 1921. Collins & Tillinghast bought a section of the townsite from Mrs. Hershey. This was marked off into lots and sold at a small payment down and reasonable terms. There were three thousand lots sold.

In November, 1921, Taylor & Howard entered the field in selling this property. Since that time 1500 lots in Montrose proper were sold in eight months and five hundred homes were constructed.

Property values increased in the business district from $750 to $2500 per lot.

Two weekly newspapers are published in Montrose. Within 60 days there will be a bank in operation in this thriving community. Two lumber yards have been established since Spetember, 1921, namely, the Bettinger Lumber company and the Johnson-Anawalt company. Sixty-eight carloads of lumber have been unloaded during the past week.

Sparr Heights, which is adjacent to Montrose, has sold within the past five weeks $500,000 worth of property.

The Earl estate will be placed on the market about November 10th.

The electrification of the Glendale Avenue car line, which will give Montrose a direct connection with Los Angeles, is assured. The cost of transportation will be only 16 cents each way.

Montrose lies 12 miles from Seventh and Broadway, Los Angeles.

The Montrose Realty Company sold forty lots in that section the past month. There is no section in Southern California where the investment possibilities are greater than in Montrose. The location is ideal, and the town has the most picturesque surroundings imaginable.

One can readily visualize the greater Montrose of the future.

NOTICE TO APPEAR BRINGS CLEVER LETTER

L. A. Black of Modesto Writes Burbank Police Funny Epistle

Motorcycle Officer Gates arrested L. A. Black for speeding about a month ago. Black didn't show up for trial and Sargeant Tupper sent him a notice asking an explanation. Here is the letter he received in reply to the card:

Dear Sir:

With tears in my eyes, I read the most unwelcome postcard. If I were to send a check today—it would be a bad one; therefore if you will kindly withhold the payment for ten days I can assure you of a most pleasant transaction.

With regards to you—and the motorcycle cop, I remain yours slowly, L. A. Black.

FORD CUTS PRICE OF AUTOMOBILE HEADLIGHTS

"As an instance of the Ford Motor company's policy of reducing prices on cars and parts to a point where the customer receives the most for his investment, and the company contents itself with a reasonable profit, may be cited," says Jesse E. Smith, Glendale Ford dealer, "the prevailing charge for Ford Headlight Lenses.

"Where other manufacturers ask and are receiving from $2 to $6 each for similar lenses, we have established a flat price of 70 cents per pair, and at that, we are not departing from the principles of good merchandising. Our lenses are passed upon and legalized in all the states of the union, and that they have found general favor with the motoring public is attested by the enormous sale of them.

"The question naturally arises," adds Mr. Smith, "how can we fix such a seemingly ridiculous price, and still make money. The answer is that aside from the company's huge volume of production, and its increasing control of the sources of raw products used at the plants, the incontrovertible fact remains that we are satisfied with a fair return on our capital, and the manufacturer who asks more is passing from profit to profiteering, and, as usual, the car owner who does not discriminate, pays the bill.

"When the people learn that they can obtain lenses, beautiful in design, adequate for every need, complying with legal requirements everywhere, and, importantly, at a fair price, then, perhaps, this illegitimate "gouging" will cease, by the well-known process of elimination," concludes Mr. Smith.

GASOLINE CONSUMPTION

The daily average consumption of gasoline in the United States has increased 69 per cent in five years.

CAN YOU 'SHIFT' PROPERLY, OR DO YOUR GEARS GRIND EACH TIME YOU TRY TO CHANGE?

Moving from Gear to Gear Is One of Important Parts of Auto Driving and Motorists Should Master Practice

Can you shift gears properly? To many motorists this question may seem out of place, but if the reader will stand at a crowded street intersection at one of the busy hours and listen to the grinding and the screeching of gears he will see that possibly the query is not so uncalled for after all.

In making any shift there is inevitably a small amount of noise, but the clashing and grinding that are so commonly heard when this operation is performed are a certain indication that the driver does not know how to handle his gearshift skilfully. Also such clashing and grinding are a certain indication that the gearshift is going to develop trouble, chipped teeth, shaft thrown out of alignment and utimate failure. Until the driver learns to shift gears quietly, he is causing excessive wear in his gearshift.

Practically every car today has what is known as the sliding selective type of gearshift. The Ford is, of course, the great exception, with its planetary system. In practically every car using the sliding selective transmission, the shifting lever is located in the center of the front seat compartment, on the driver's right.

In construction the sliding transmission embodies one shaft with fixed gears and another with sliding gears, the latter being pushed into mesh with the former when the shifting lever is moved. It is obvious that if the gears are to mesh quietly the two sets must be traveling at approximately the same rate of speed. The driver who has realized this, who thrusts the sliding gears into mesh with the fixed gears when the two are traveling at totally different rates of speed, gets the clashing and grinding that we so commonly hear.

To get the two sets of gears moving at approximately the same rate of speed, requires thought and practice. For instance, in shifting from first to second gear, the driver should pause a second or two, after the lever is in neutral, before he pushes it into second. The reason for this is that the moment the clutch is disengaged the second speed gear is traveling at a different rate of speed from that of the corresponding gear on the countershaft. By delaying just a second, the speeds have a chance to become about equal and a quiet shift results.

There is seldom any difficulty in shifting from second to third or from third to fourth, in cars equipped with a four-speed gearset.

The most troublesome change for most drivers is that from third back to second and this is where we get the clashing and grinding. To begin with most drivers make this downward shift when the car is traveling too fast. The car should not be going more than ten miles per hour or fifteen at the outside. The best method of avoiding the trouble is by accelerating the engine just a little, just as the shift is about to be made and before the clutch is thrown out. Do not accelerate after the clutch has been disengaged. Remember, just a slight touch on the accelerator pedal, just before the clutch is thrown out.

A little practice will enable any driver to make an almost soundless shift and will add materially to the length of life of his gearshift.

TAKE IN BEAUTY SPOTS NEAR HOME

Cool evenings and mornings deplete the crowds at the beaches materially, make the mountains obsolete for enjoyment, and the traffic will burn up more of the roads in the close vicinity of Los Angeles than it has for some time resident recently, "motorists who live in Glendale can find practically any kind of country they desire to travel over, from mountains to the beaches. Many interesting scenes are to be had almost without searching for them, and the automobile owner who enjoys home cooking and his own bedroom at night is having a great time of it over the week-ends at this time of the year.

"Traffic on the road easily shows that the tendency of motorists is growing towards staying closer to home. Enjoying their cars on Saturday afternoon and Sunday, however, they throng the highways, leave town for a short distance, and find innumerable spots of interest to attract them. This is the time of year when motorists learn of many things that cause them to wonder why they didn't find them before, when, as a matter of fact, the weather really attracted them to extend their touring radius."

MUCH GAS AVAILABLE

The amount of gasoline available in refinery storage on May 21, 1922, for each of the 10,448,632 automobiles registered on January 1, 1922, was 82 gallons, compared with an average of 87 gallons for each of the automobiles registered on January 1 of the years 1918 to 1921, inclusive.

CONCRETE ROADS ARE BEST IS CLAIM

For years engineers and public officials have been endeavoring to satisfy themselves from actual performance which type of road or street construction was the most lasting or most permanent.

This decision was always made difficult because of the fact that each particular type of road, and each kind of material, was studied under widely varying conditions and locations.

The usual result was one kind of road in one locality, built under certain climatic conditions, upon one soil, and carrying a certain amount of traffic, while another road of a different kind, with which it was desired to compare to the first, had been built under different climatic soil and traffic conditions, so that seldom could any two types of road be fairly and accurately compared to determine which one withstood the greatest amount of traffic and would prove the most durable road or street.

It was not until the building of the Pittsburg Test Highway at Pittsburg, Calif., that officials and engineers got their first proof that a plain concrete road of a given thickness would withstand the pounding of heavily-loaded trucks better than a thinner section, with the usual amount of reinforcing steel embedded within to reinforce it.

Nevertheless, it has been conceived by many engineers that a concrete road could be sufficiently reinforced to stand up under a considerable amount of traffic, but the view has also been taken that with this considerable amount of steel additional concrete could be added to the thickness of the road and the same results obtained, with even a longer life, under similar traffic.

However, one regrettable feature of the Pittsburg highway was the fact that only one type (concrete) was used on all sections. Up to the present time there had been no chance to compare the various materials that are used in road building to enable road builders to decide on the best.

Many false and misleading reports were circulated concerning the test road. Some were to the effect that all kinds of materials were used and cement concrete stood up the best, and other reports were that because some sections of reinforced concrete had broken up that the concrete sections were a failure.

No consideration was given to the fact that the traffic that had gone over these sections, before they failed, had been variously estimated by engineers as being the normal traffic that goes over the average road in from thirty to fifty years.

It remained for the Bates experimental road at Springfield, Ill., to be constructed of all types and kinds of the many proven materials used in the so-called "permanent" roads.

In conjunction with the U. S. Bureau of Public Roads, the Illinois Highway Department built an experimental road two and one-half miles in length, composed of sixty-three different designs of roads, and trucks have been running over these sections testing them to destruction, in an endeavor to prove the superiority of any one kind of road building materials.

Included in these sections were asphaltic concrete on macadam and concrete bases; brick on macadam, and concrete bases; asphalt on macadam and concrete of various thicknesses and designs.

Some thinner sections of concrete had patented hardening chemicals.

At the beginning of the test runs, light loads were used and these were increased until 8000 pound loads were used on each rear wheel, which is the maximum load allowed by the Illinois State laws.

According to the latest reports under date of August 15, of the original sixty-three sections, there remained only eleven sections undamaged by traffic which had passed over them.

Of these eleven sections one was asphalt on a concrete base, one was brick on a concrete base and the other nine sections were various thicknesses of cement concrete, varying in thickness from 5 to 9 inches.

THREE IN HOSPITAL AFTER MISHAP HERE

Oakland Man and Family Victims of Auto Smash-up in Burbank

Three people have been in the Cottage hospital for several days as a result of an antomobile accident which occurred on South San Fernando boulevard last Tuesday.

The injured are:

Fred P. Schaer, of Oakland, bruised.

Mrs. Lydia Schaer, badly cut and bruised.

Gladys Schaer, 10 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Schaer, cut in face and badly bruised.

Schaer was driving south on San Fernando boulevard when a delivery car, driven by William B. Pray, of Burbank, came out of a side street, struck the Schaer car and upset it.

A daughter of the Schaers died but a few days ago and the unhappy couple, with their daughter, had left their home for a few days.

Mr. Schaer is owner of the Lydia cleaning and dyeing establishment in Oakland.

The unfortunate little family have recovered sufficiently to leave the hospital and are resting here a few days to recover from the shock of the accident.

AUTOS OUTCARRY STEAM LINES

The automobile is today the leading passenger transportation agency in the United States.

There are today 55,250 railroad passenger coaches in use, having a seating capacity of 2,270,000 passengers. The seating capacity of 9,500,000 automobiles now in use is 47,000,000.

Based on records for the last five years, there should be 47,000,000,000 passenger miles to the credit of rail facilities in 1922. The average number of passengers per automobile is two, and the average annual mileage is 6000. Hence, the automobile must be credited with 114,000,000,000 passenger miles this year.

MUCH GASOLINE WASTED DAILY

A daily wastage of 200,000 gallons of gasoline, by evaporation from 775 uninsulated storage tanks throughout the country, was reported yesterday as one of the major findings of an extensive survey on conservation just completed by engineers of the U. S. Bureau of Mines. The rate at which these evaporation losses take place has now been closely calculated. A 55,000 barrel storage tank, holding gasoline, will lose about 6 per cent of its contents in one year. A similar tank, holding crude oil, will lose about 3 per cent in one year, and the loss from crude oil will be almost entirely pure gasoline. The loss from 775 tanks, including both types, is therefore estimated at 72,765,000 gallons, an economic loss, at 20 cents a gallon, amounting to $14,553,000.

NEW AUTO FUEL FOUND, CLAIM

Every motorist is told in forceful terms each day that the gasoline he is using is none too good. We say it is low-grade. Such gasoline in present engines causes excessive knocking, rapid carbonization, crankcase dilution and a lot of other troubles. But we soon shall be rid of all of this, what is more, the industry will shortly begin the consideration of really high-compression engines, regardless of the nature of the fuel sold. All of this is new development, at least new to the motorist, although the big men in the automobile field have been trying to overcome the defects of fuel for many years.

For the present a substance has been developed which takes the knock out of engines—not a bearing knock or a wrist pin knock, but the troublesome pinking due to the bad fuel. This knocking slows you down on a grade and makes you retard the spark every so often. A prominent research department is responsible for finding a substance called tetra ethyl lead (alcohol lead) which, when mixed with gasoline in the proportions of one cubic centimeter to the gallon, stops the knocking. Of course, violent overheating or incandescent carbon will continue to cause knocking, but if enough of the new substance is used, even knocking under those conditions is reduced.

But there is more to the new substance than the mere removal of the knocking in present engines. These engines run at 60, 65 or 70 pounds compression pressure, with a maximum compression ratio of, say, 4½ to 1. The industry wants to use compression ratios of 7 and 7½ to 1, corresponding to 100 to 120 pounds compression. That will mean economy in fuel, more power, less crankcase dilution. But we cannot increase compression without causing excessive knocking, due to the high heat and pressure.

This knocking, by the way, is usually caused by a spark knock, but is actually a violent detonation caused by the breaking down of the fuel into one or more compounds that do not merely explode but detonate. It is the force and sound of the detonation that you hear when you are pulling up a hill. The knocking may go away on retarded spark, because then the explosion mixture is fired at lower pressure and it is the high pressure or heat that causes the knocking.

For many years the industry knew that we could not have high-compression engines or remove the knock in present ones without altering the nature of the fuel. All sorts of compounds were tried and some of them were highly successful in their work, but they cost too much. The new substance, a liquid, resulted after testing hundreds of different compounds. Made of alcohol and lead, it is certain that we shall have control over the main ingredients, for our lead mines are plentiful and alcohol is produced anywhere in any desired quantity. The writer had the pleasure of using some tetra ethyl lead and can say that it is quite efficient when the right amount is used.

But the important thing to the motorist is that he may get some of this substance. This he cannot do at the present time, but very shortly the vendors of gasoline will sell the fuel already "doped," as it is the intention of the producers of the compound to sell it to the refiners for mixing at the plant where the gasoline is made. Then it is planned to get wider and wider distribution on this doped fuel so that in time nothing but this anti-knock fuel will be available.

When the happy day comes we will already be driving high-compression engines, for these will not be marketed until the anti-knock fuel can be had anywhere. While the cost of the fuel will be for the present some 2 cents a gallon more than ordinary fuel, the saving in gasoline and the increase in power will alone make for extreme economy.

The engineer, however, when he is certain of being able to market high-compression engines, will at once turn his energies to the development of a different sort of vehicle—a new conception of a light car. The high-compression will permit of high speed, high output engines per unit of displacement and these engines will be light in weight and will go in lighter weight chassis perhaps made out of duralumin, or some other aluminum alloy.

STOP THOSE SQUEAKS

There are few things about an automobile more annoying than squeaks, but they can be suppressed by tightening the parts rubbing together, by placing felt, rubber or leather pads between the rubbing surfaces. The use of oil, graphite or grease will also help.

U. S. AUTOS IN FRANCE

Despite the almost prohibitive customs, freight and selling expenses, six different makes of American passenger automobiles were on exhibition at the French automobile show recently held in Paris.

RAINY WEATHER MOTORING TIPS

BY M. R. FERGUSON

How to handle a car in rainy weather is one of the requisites of the good driver.

Every season brings to the highways a great number of new drivers who are inexperienced when it comes to handling a car on wet streets. A few suggestions at this time may be beneficial to any motorists of this section.

Failure to keep one's mind on his driving and his eyes on the road seems to be the great fault of so many drivers, and after an accident, one or more of the parties usually admit to themselves at least that they did not see the other car in time to turn out or stop their machine. Naturally, on wet pavements the danger is much greater and more time is needed to stop a car.

A careful examination of the brakes should be made to see that the brakes work evenly in both wheels. If they don't, it takes but a slight pressure of the brakes to make a car skid and then most drivers are helpless and an accident is the result. Non-skid tires of practically every make are a great help to prevent slipping.

In descending hills, it is advisable to go down in second gear. The compression of the motor holds the car and practically eliminates the possibility of skidding. Don't rely on your brakes to make a quick stop. Handle your car so that this is not necessary.

Keep the windshield clean at all times, so that you can see. One of the many automatic cleaners that are to be had at the different accessory houses is a great help.

Allow more distance from the car ahead of you in rainy weather. You may need this space at any moment. You save an expensive repair bill to your car and the one just ahead.

Start a little sooner to your destination keeping these suggestions in mind, and the chances are good that you will arrive there in safety.

NEW TARIFF WILL HELP AUTO TRADE

Almost nothing which has happened in recent years will have such a tendency to stimulate American automotive foreign trade as the newly agreed upon export tariff, according to W. H. Court, of the Court Motor company, 335 South Brand, local Cadillac dealer.

"The automobile duty has been reduced to 25 per cent, but elastic powers are accorded the president. And, if conditions warrant, this could be increased by one-half, bringing it up to a maximum of 37½ per cent," explains Mr. McNaughton. "Thus the American manufacturers will be accorded an equality in foreign countries that will enable them to retain the dominant share of the world automotive trade.

"For instance, France, noting that duty on her cars has been reduced 25 per cent, will undoubtedly reduce her duty, which amounts to 45 per cent on American cars. Italy has been collecting 35 per cent plus a duty based on weight ranging from 60 to 120 liras per 100 kilos. There is no doubt lowering of the Italian duty will take place, once we take the initial step.

"If some manufacturing countries are unwilling to allow a duty as low as 25 per cent on American vehicles in return for an equally low rate on its automobiles brought into the United States, steps could be taken to have a higher rate, up to 37½ per cent, apply.

LIABLE FOR PASSENGERS

In certain parts of England operators of motor vehicles are not only responsible for the handling of their cars, but are liable to be fined if they allow their passengers to misbehave during a ride.

FIRST WHITE WOMAN TO CROSS HIGHEST PEAKS OF THIRD RANGE OF THE ANDES

Mrs. Marjorie Howarth, wife of a New York business man, who traveled with her, is the first white woman to cross the highest peaks of the third range of the Andes mountains, 10,000 feet above sea level. Her trip covered 885 miles in Ecuador, Peru and the upper reaches of the Amazon.

TO GET SERVICE ROTATE YOUR CASINGS

The motor public has been so thoroughly "fed up" on do's and don'ts for their cars and equipment that the conscientious manufacturer hesitates to add to the conglomeration of promiscuous advice to be found in every newspaper and magazine published.

However, from this mass can be gleaned many valuable pieces of information and it is primarily true that every message contains some information that can be utilized to a measured extent.

A three-word message to motorists given by a tire dealer, which will solve the extra tire service problem in a practical manner is, "rotate your tires." A tire expert says:

"You would not expect a pair of boots, stored in a damp place and forgotten until you are ready to use them to give you any degree of satisfactory service, but you unreasonably blame your extra tire clamped to your car, subjected to all conditions of weather and neglected until you have occasion to use it, for its failure to stand up under service.

"Is your reasoning logical?

"Why not try changing your tires from wheel to wheel? Use them all, the extra tire included, a comparatively regular intervals and see how much better they all wear.

"What about the tire the careless driver stops his car with against the curb? Why not distribute that abuse among them all, if you must insist upon saving your brakes and time?

"It isn't a question of how you rotate them, it is simply a matter of giving them an equal share of the wear and keeping them all in use. Further, it isn't impossible to practice tire rotation and it certainly is practical.

"Use all your tires in all positions and be convinced that the manufacturer wants you to know how to use a tire in order to get the utmost in mileage and service, after it is sold."

The firm of Anders & Halfhill, composed of C. R. Anders and H. M. Halfhill, which has been doing business in Glendale for the past two years, has just taken over the Glendale agency for the Chalmers Six automobile, which agency is now located at 246 South Brand boulevard.

Heretofore this firm has conducted a used car market on the lot just south of the Masonic temple on Brand boulevard. It has the distinction of being the first firm in Glendale to conduct an open-air automobile market. In taking over the Chalmers line this firm believes it is doing a real service for the people of Glendale, as there are many motorists and prospective motorists in Glendale who are ardent devotees of the good Chalmers car.

This latest Chalmers is a revelation and for the price is one of the most wonderful buys to be found anywhere.

"There are many new features to the 1923 Chalmers," said Mr. Anders today, "all of which go to make it a mighty good all-around automobile. For appearance, performance and flexibility it cannot be surpassed for anything like the price."

Both Mr. Anders and Mr. Halfhill are residents of Glendale and are doing all they can to boost the city. They believe the business possibilities of Glendale cannot be equalled anywhere in Southern California.

MOTORISTS FIGHT NEW GAS LAW

The next step of the gasoline tax proponents is to be taken at the annual meeting of the Michigan State Good Roads Association in November, according to word from Lansing. At that time the association will be asked to pass a resolution asking the State Legislature to pass a gasoline tax law.

The Detroit Auto Club is opposed to the gasoline law as a tax measure and efforts are being made to block the move. Colonel Sidney D. Waldon, president of the Detroit Automobile Club, will lead the fight against the measure which will be taken up on the floor of the Legislature when that body meets early in the new year.

The tax measure originated when it was found that the state was running short of money for building of good roads. The motorists do not depreciate good roads, but insist that additional money for this work should not be raised through a gasoline tax which only motorists would pay, but should be raised by some means in which farmers and others who derive some of advantages of improved roads would defray a portion.

LIMELIGHT EVER IS ON THE AUTO

"There is probably no single object among all the interesting and attractive things in the world today that draws so much constant interest as the automobile," says Lyman P. Clark of the Glendale Motor Car company, 124 West Colorado, Maxwell dealers.

"Everybody is interested in cars. People who don't own one often know as much about them as old and seasoned motorists.

"And you would be surprised at the manner in which these non-owners keep posted on car models and specifications.

"We cordially invite people to drop in at any time and look over our line of Maxwell automobiles. Many of them already have learned that here is a place where they can look and ask questions to their hearts' content, without being pestered to buy anything.

"There is no need to urge anybody to buy a car. For everybody wants one. And all these folks who go visiting around today are conscious of the fact that some day they will own an automobile.

"They are very wisely learning all they can about them now, and when they are ready to purchase, they will know just what they want."

Crossing Stops May Be Law

As a means of reducing accidents on highways in Detroit, Mich., city officials are considering the advisability of requiring the driver of an automobile or truck to come to a full stop before crossing or entering any artery of traffic, barring from the boulevards and avenues all delivery vehicles, trucks and teams.

In replacing a shackle, thoroughly oil or grease the surface of the shaft, and if possible, rotate it as you replace it.

Change in Theft Law Is Asked

The National Auto Anti-Theft Association has started a nation-wide movement to interest Congress in adopting an amendment to the Federal Automobile law, which now makes it a felony to take a stolen car across a state line. The proposed amendment would prohibit the export of any automobile, and forbid any steamship line to issue its bill of lading for the transport of any auto, whether or not boxed, until its motor and factory numbers are certified by an inspector of customs as intact (and recorded) and further certified not to be on the list of stolen autos to be required to be kept posted in the office of the collector of customs of each port of entry in the United States.

WATCH AT CROSSINGS

It has been estimated that only one out of every four operators uses the necessary precautions for safety at grade crossings.

WHITE SPOT OIL STATION IS HERE

The White Spot service station is one of the very latest business establishments to make its appearance in Glendale. It is located at 900 South San Fernando road and is one of the most up-to-date places of its kind in Glendale.

A new idea in the sale of gasoline has been inaugurated at this station. This consists of giving to the person buying every 225th gallon of gasoline sold at this station, five gallons of the fiery fluid free. Both Gilmore and Union gasoline are sold at the White Spot, and an excellent greasing service is maintained in connection.

AUSTRIAN MONEY

Last August a dollar was worth 84,000 crowns.

Pedestrians Cause Many Mishaps

The pedestrian is at fault in 85 per cent of the traffic accidents in New England, says the Massachusetts Highway Commission in a report recently. Further, reports that most of the road mishaps are needless; but that as nothing can be done to the pedestrians the only method of getting results is to revoke the licenses of the reckless drivers.

London to Try Rubber Streets

As an experiment, a street in London is to be paced with rubber blocks. If it proves successful, rubber will replace wooden blocks and asphalt road surfaces elsewhere. Although the cost of construction is greater, it has already been proved that rubber gives a hard, solid foundation, and has the advantage of less noise and longer life over other forms of pavement.

Unlawful Practice of the Law

Must Be Stopped in California.

Twenty-four Other States have Stopped It!

The Women and Children! Are they to be protected?

Are you a real man?

Do you believe in protecting the rights and interests of women?

Does your heart respond to the helplessness and trust of little children?

Do you believe that charitable and educational institutions and churches are worthy of receiving financial assistance in preference to tying up estates in the hands of certain trust companies?

Do you believe that a man's widow and children should have the protection and benefit of his life's savings?

The Legislature and the Governor answered these questions "YES," and therefore passed the Act which appears on the ballot as Proposition Number 24.

The real opponents of this measure are certain trust companies and branch banks, hiding behind the fictitious name of "Public Rights Committee."

THEREFORE

If you oppose making women and children dependent on certain Trust Companies through Wills drawn by their employees for the benefit of these corporations—

If you oppose the centralization of the State's wealth in the hands of a few Trust Companies—

If you are opposed to tying up vast sums of money and property by Trust Companies during the life of a decedent's children and their children—

THEN—You will Stop the Unlawful Practice of the Law by Voting "YES" on Proposition No. 24.

MOTORIST TELLS OF FINE TRIP

Telling a story of the wonders of the scenery on the road from San Francisco to Vancouver, B. C., and return, a prominent motorist has returned to San Francisco from a trip of several weeks' duration.

Accompanied by his wife and their eight-month-old daughter, this motorist left San Francisco the later part of July, driving as far as Dunsmuir for the first night's stop. Leaving Dunsmuir early the following morning they crossed the Siskiyou mountains, making Medford, Ore., for the second night. From there they proceeded northward to Portland through Cow Creek canyon and the beautiful Rogue river and Willamette valleys.

Corvalis, Ore., was made the third night, the party leaving there and ferrying the Columbia river to Kalama, proceeding to Seattle on the next day. This day's run totaled approximately 300 miles, the longest day's jaunt. In fact, the motorist showed as much enthusiasm over the car he drove as he did over the scenic beauties and delights of the trip.

In speaking of his trip this motorist said:

"We did not even suffer the inconvenience of a puncture on the long jaunt, and although we drove from sea level to an altitude of 6000 feet in crossing the summit of the Siskiyou, we made no carburetor adjustment of any kind."

They covered a total distance of 3147 miles on four days going and three days returning, spent on the road.

The custom formerly in vogue in British Columbia of driving on the left side of the road has been changed since January 1 of this year to the American custom of keeping to the right, much to the delight of American tourists. Several places en route boasted automobile camps that pleased the traveled, notably the National camping ground located at Medford, Ore. This park is equipped with electric washing machines, electric irons, a huge swimming pool and other conveniences, all of which are available to the motorist at a nominal daily charge.

Contractor Carries Liability Insurance

The only kind of insurance the contractor carries is liability. This is a state law, making it compulsory for the contractor to cover his employes only, and insurance covering fire and theft is subscribed for by the owner. If this insurance is engaged when the operations are started no charge is made for the period of construction, although the insurance companies will pay any and all damages.

JACK JOHNSON ASKS ANOTHER CHANCE

By HENRY L. FARRELL
United Press Sports Editor

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—With the optimistic, carefree attitude that has always been characteristic of him, Jack Johnson, former world's heavyweight champion, still hopes that he will get a break in his favor and will be allowed to return to the ring.

No matter if he is alone in thinking so, Big Jack firmly believes he has a lot left and that he could work up to another chance for the title.

He has been working out daily in the gymnasium at Madison Square Garden and sounding out the boxing commission preparatory to making an application for a license.

Unless the commission deems it a good political move to reverse itself, Johnson cannot be granted a license as long as the present rule establishing 38 years as the age limit for boxers remains on the book.

This rule was enacted as a direct move to prevent Johnson and Jess Willard from boxing in New York.

Johnson admits "about 42 years" but some ring followers who have known him a long time, think he is even older.

The former champion weighs around 230 pounds. He is at an age now where flesh is removed only with a great deal of labor and as he is said to be well fixed financially, it is not clear why he should choose the tedium of hard training to get back in shape.

Johnson claims that he can beat Harry Wills or any others of the heavyweight contender class. Perhaps he could. He did not show any too much in his training, however. Tarzan Larkin, no better than a tenth-rater, worked out with him recently and Jack quit after three rounds, breathing hard through cut and swollen lips.

In its attitude on the Johnson case the boxing commission is in a ticklish position. It has to listen to arguments that the return of the former champion would not be a good thing for boxing and at the same time to avoid the chance of accusations that it was not giving him a square deal.

Regardless of what Johnson has done in the past, he has been very well behaved since he left Leavenworth. He paid his debt there for his indiscretions of the past and right down to the fine point it must be admitted that he is square now.

Although it was generally believed that he was broke when he came back to the United States and surrendered to the federal authorities, Johnson shows no signs of being in need of money.

He still dresses like a fashion plate and drives around in a high priced car. He spends a lot of money and apparently earns a lot. He was doing theatrical work for a while at $1000 a week but the show closed and at the present time he is "out of work."

While he did much to draw censure on him, there were always some admirable traits about Johnson. Those who were not inclined to be prejudiced always agreed that Jack was made the victim of bad friends and poor advice.

New Auto Park for Motorists

State Forester M. B. Pratt today announced that California is to have a new state park for the accommodation of motorists in the northern part of the state. The new park, comprising about 160 acres, is in Shasta County and includes Burney Falls, scenic waterfalls on Burney Creek and a virgin forest of yellow pine.

GOOD ADVICE

If you would be looked upon as a nice steerer in city driving avoid sharp turns to either side, move into, and away from, the curb in a gradual, slow line; tell the driver behind you all you can by left-arm signals; keep to the extreme right when contemplating a right turn and swing into the main line of traffic to the center of the street before making a left turn, so that in either case, you will not have to pass directly in front of another car.

ACTION PICTURE OF BLOODY DUEL

Here is a truly remarkable action picture of a bloody rapier duel fought on the Italian estate of the Duke of Gallese between Candido Sassone, fencing instructor for Prince Ereditario, and Aurelio Greco. The duel had once been stopped by the police, but the duelists, foremost swordsmen in Italy, arranged to meet on the private estate. Sassone was seroiusly wounded.

MOTORIST CAMP WELL PATRONIZED

The municipal auto camp of Sacramento accomodated more people this year than ever before. This is shown by a report prepared by City Controller H. C. Bottorf for the season.

Up to and including October 23, 11,653 autos had visited the park. Of this number 11,641 had paid for one-day tickets, ten for seven days and two for three-day tickets. The revenue derived from these cars by charging each 35 cents per day amounts to $4,099.65. The cost of operating the park to date has been $1,849.16. This is the first year that a charge has been made.

ALASKAN TRUTHS

By CHARLES SHINN
(Forest Examiner)

Among all the pressing questions now before the people and the government of the United States, nothing else, as thoughtful students of economics, social science and natural resources have come to believe, is one-half as important in its far reaching consequences as the course taken in regard to Alaska. Every person who loves his country, and especially every Californian, ought to read and think about the accident which has left, until now, about 90 percent of the total area of Alaska in government hands, thus protecting it from exploitation. A book worth reading is Vilhjalmur Stefansson's "The Friendly Arctic," a recent magazine article of pith is John D. Guthries' "Alaskan Interior Forests," which leads in the August issue of American Forestry. Especially important is a report of former Chief Graves, published in 1915. He estimated the annual destruction by uncontrolled forest fires at a million acres a year!

The area of the forests of interior Alaska, is variously estimated at from eighty to a hundred million acres. In the near future all of the resources of these forests will be needed to supply paper for the rest of the United States and to develop that wonderful northland which once was Russia's and is to become the home of millions of our children's children. Alaska covers more than 300,000 square miles. Its interior forests are chiefly in the drainage basins of the Yukon, Kuskokwin, and Porcupine rivers, and their tributaries. These forests are comparable in potential value with those of northern Maine as they were in colonial times.

Protection of the Alaskan forests can only come through an aroused public demand. Then there must be trained foresters, patrolmen and rangers preventing future fires. But the things for Californians to remember are that Alaska is big enough to make two states of California's size, and that thousands of our people have interests in that great northland. We want those forests to have care, study, development and use.
